accordance to empirical evidence We find large and persistent effects of weather shocks that significantly impact the income convergence path of disaster prone countries Relative to non disaster prone countries on average these shocks cause a welfare loss equivalent to a permanent fall in consumption of 1.6 percent Welfare gains to countries that self finance investments in resilient public infrastructure are found to be negligible and international aid has to be sizable to achieve significant welfare gains In addition it is more cost effective for donors to contribute to the financing of resilience before the realization of disasters rather than disbursing aid after their realization
