Lecturer: Tue/Thu

Office: P-17 L

Office Hours: TBA

Catalog Description:

This course is intended to provide descriptive analysis of the structure and functioning of the economy of the United States. Emphasizes national income, problems of inflation and unemployment, the role of government, money supply, and economic growth.

Jon's Description:

The primary aim of this class is to introduce the economist's way of thought. In particular, we investigate why the United States (and many other countries) adopted a market based approach to managing the fundamental economic problem of scarcity and unlimited wants. This intuition is dependent upon understanding the nature of the consumer and firm. We flesh out the many shortcomings of the market based system such as income inequality, unemployment, inflation and the business cycle. We then reason through the increased role of the government to alleviate the consequences of such market failures.

Successful Students:

Will be able to: (1) assess the impact of external events using market analysis, (2) explain how market based economies evolve, (3) explain the role of competition and the role of the government in market based economies, and (4) offer various policy options to alter the state of the economy.
