Maize Value Chain Analysis In Ethiopia Thesisr:

Digital finance and agri-food value chains: Case studies from Ethiopia Wassie, Solomon, 2025-07-09 Agriculture is of paramount importance to Ethiopia's economy. Agriculture accounts for 40 percent of the country's GDP, 80 percent of export earnings, and employs 75 percent of the population (Tamene Barrett et al, 2022). Report on off-farm post-harvest loss assessment survey in Ethiopia Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, 2023-01-21. A study on post-harvest losses was conducted in Amhara, Oromiya, and the Southern Nations, Nationalities, and Peoples' Regions of Ethiopia to pilot a methodology to produce national statistics of off-farm losses. The study was conducted by the Ethiopian Statistics Service (ESS) with technical and financial support from the Office of the Chief Statistician and the Statistics Division of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO). Review of sheep research and development projects in Ethiopia Gizaw, S., Abegaz, S., Rischkowsky, B., Haile, A., Okeyo, A.M. and Dessie, T., 2013-12-31. Sustainable Development and Planning XI S. Syngellakis, S. Hernández, 2020-11-25. In its 11th edition, the International Conference on Sustainable Development and Planning continues to attract academics, policy makers, practitioners, and other stakeholders from across the globe who discuss the latest advances in the field. This volume presents selected papers that contribute to further advances in the field. Energy saving and eco-friendly building approaches have become an important part of modern development, which places special emphasis on resource optimisation. Planning has a key role to play in ensuring that these solutions, as well as new materials and processes, are incorporated in the most efficient manner. Problems related to development and planning, which affect rural and urban areas, are present in all regions of the world. Accelerated urbanisation has resulted in deterioration of the environment and loss of quality of life. Urban development can also aggravate problems faced by rural areas, such as forests, mountain regions, and coastal areas, amongst many others. Taking into consideration the interaction between different regions and developing new methodologies for monitoring, planning, and implementation of novel strategies can offer solutions for mitigating environmental pollution and non-sustainable use of available resources.

The Economics of Managing Crop Diversity On-farm Edilegnaw Wale, 2012-06-25. The purpose of this book is to assess a variety of economic issues as they relate to agro-biodiversity and show how addressing these issues can assist in agro-biodiversity policy making. This is illustrated using empirical data from some of the countries Ethiopia, Nepal, and Zambia, which are part of the Genetic Resources Policy Initiative. The empirical chapters apply the relevant economic methods, including regression analysis, choice experiments, hedonic pricing, contingent valuation, and farm business income analysis. The authors discuss the economics of managing crop diversity on-farm in the context of crop variety attribute preferences, farmers' perception of agro-biodiversity loss and value addition, and marketing of the products of traditional crop varieties. The case studies include detailed analysis of traditional varieties of groundnut, maize, rice, sorghum, and teff. The results are relevant not only to GRPI countries but also to other countries concerned with the sustainable utilization of these resources.

Overall the studies illustrate how genetic resources issues can be integrated into rural development interventions

Ranganath, 2011 Post-harvest losses in rural-urban value chains: Evidence from Ethiopia Minten, Bart, Tamru, Seneshaw, Reardon, Thomas, 2019-09-12 We study post harvest losses PHL in important and rapidly growing rural urban value chains in Ethiopia We analyze self reported PHL from different value chain agents farmers wholesale traders processors and retailers based on unique large scale data sets for two major commercial commodities the storable staple teff and the perishable liquid milk PHL in the most prevalent value chain pathways for teff and milk amount to between 2.2 and 3.3 percent and 2.1 and 4.3 percent of total produced quantities respectively We complement these findings with primary data from urban food retailers for more than 4 000 commodities Estimates of PHL from this research overall are found to be significantly lower than is commonly assumed We further find that the emerging modern retail sector in Ethiopia is characterized by half the level of PHL than are observed in the traditional retail sector This is likely due to more stringent quality requirements at procurement sales of more packaged and therefore better protected commodities and better refrigeration storage and sales facilities The further expected expansion of modern retail in these settings should likely lead to a lowering of PHL in food value chains at least at the retail level Identifying priority value-chains in Ethiopia Benfica, Rui, Thurlow, James, 2017-09-15 This paper uses an economy wide model to identify agricultural activities and value chains in Ethiopia whose expansion would be most effective at generating economic growth reducing national and rural poverty creating jobs and diversifying diets Results indicate that expanding cereals production would continue to contribute positively to national pro poor growth. However, the analysis suggests that there is no single value chain that can achieve all policy objectives. Instead, a more balanced portfolio of value chains would not only enhance agriculture's future contribution to poverty reduction and economic growth but also promote faster rural transformation and dietary diversification, both of which are needed to create job opportunities and improve nutrition outcomes over the longer term. After considering alternative weighting schemes for competing policy goals, the final analysis suggests that vegetables and fruits tree crops should be considered priority value chains because these are among the most effective at achieving multiple policy objectives. Other highly ranked value chains include oilseeds, tobacco, cotton, tea, and milk dairy.
