

Intermediate Macroeconomics – Revision Notes

General:

- Macroeconomics: A branch of economics dealing with the performance, structure, behaviour and decision-making of the entire economy.
- Political influence on the economy and hence macroeconomics needs to be recognised.
- The three major macroeconomic objectives are output (high economic growth); low unemployment (<3%); and low and stable inflation (CPI at 2% +/- 1%).
 - Independently these variables are easy to understand.
 - When they occur together trade-offs are apparent.
- In EUROPE, the major concerns are with high unemployment (implications of the financial crisis); growth of income per person; and the common currency.
 - Supporters of the euro argue it will create large economic power due to absence of exchange rate fluctuations.
- In the US, the slowdown of the economy can be explained by the oil price drop and changes within the housing market.
- The BRICS COUNTRIES are now the largest economies outside the group of advanced countries due to their rapid growth following higher accumulations of capital, and faster technological progress.
 - Recently growth has plateaued, and unemployment has risen.
- CHINA reflects a country of success, with growth doubling every 7 years despite low inflation rates.
- To measure macroeconomic progress, the following data sources are available:
 - Organisation for Economic Cooperation's and Development – gather data for the richest countries.
 - International Financial Statistics (IMF) – for countries not members of the OECD.
 - World Economic Outlook (IMF) – assessment of macroeconomic developments in various parts of the world.

Output

- Economists use national accounts to measure aggregate economic activity.
 - National income and product accounts are an accounting system used to measure economic activity.
 - The measure of aggregate output is GDP.
- The three national accounting methods of measuring GDP are:
 - GDP as the value of the final goods and services produced in the economy during a given period.
 - GDP as the sum of value added in the economy during a given period.
 - GDP as the sum of incomes in the economy during a given period.
- For the final goods approach, tally what each sector sells as a final good to find aggregate output.
 - A final good is one destined for final consumption.
 - An intermediate good is a good used in the production of another.
- For the value-added approach, find the sales and intermediate goods of each sector; and subtract the intermediate goods from the sales to find the aggregate output.
