Graduate Work Gerbrand Tholen, 2017-10-06 The expansion of Higher Education has been one of the most important changes to affect Western labour markets More than a third of all British workers are now degree holders The graduate labour market is often understood as that part of the labour market characterized by high skills and high knowledge intensity and that is perceived to be needed and used in an increasingly complex economy Higher education is presumed to be the developer of these advanced skills Yet with the graduatisation of the workforce comes growing concerns about as well as misunderstanding of what jobs graduates occupy how they utilise their skills and what the role of education is within graduate work and the competition for jobs The book examines some of the assumptions placed on graduate work graduate jobs graduate skills and graduate careers It provides valuable insights how we can understand the meaning of graduate work within a rapidly changing economic technological and organizational context Based on in depth qualitative case studies of software developers financial analysts laboratory scientists and press officers the book shows that the graduate labour market is more heterogeneous than often is understood What counts as graduate work remains contested and under constant reinterpretation and re negotiation Access to work job performance and career advancement are not necessarily driven by university qualifications and skills associated with Higher Education The book begins to explore how and to what extent those workers with university degrees are defined by their educational experiences status and qualifications

HLP 120 - Overlooked and Left Behind: Improving the Transition from School to Work for the Majority of Young People The Stationery Office, 2016 The transition from school into work is a vital point in the lives of young people Making a successful transition through a high quality and valued pathway can mean a successful career Becoming trapped in poor quality and under valued alternatives can mean a lifetime of poverty This report is about young people and social mobility and focuses on how to ensure that all young people are offered a high quality career path after they leave school We have found that the current policy structure means a large number of young people do not have good options and are not supported to make a choice which works for them and is successful An increasing number of young people leave school and go on to A Levels and university Of the others a small minority are at risk of dropping out of education employment or training the NEETS Successive governments have focused on these two groups for a long time But the majority of young people in the UK do not fall into either group They do not go to university they find jobs or they continue with some form of vocational education Despite making up the majority of the emerging workforce they have received much less attention It is these young people who are the focus of this report The current system for young people who do not follow an academic route is complex and incoherent with confusing incentives for young people and employers Careers advice and education are being delivered in a way which means that too many young people simply drift into further studies or their first job which often has no real prospect of progression

The Changing Nature of the Graduate Labour Market G. Tholen,2014-09-23 The assumptions made in the media regarding graduate skills and occupations are no longer valid within the changing educational context This book traces seven key trends that shape the graduate labour market and reveals that their effects contradict the conceptualisation of the graduate labour market which dominates media and policy discourses

Gender and Time Use in a Global Context Rachel Connelly,Ebru Kongar,2017-07-10 This edited volume uses a feminist approach to explore the economic implications of the complex interrelationship between gender and time use Household composition sexuality migration patterns income levels and race ethnicity are all considered as important factors that interact with gender and time use patterns The book is split in two sections The macroeconomic portion explores cutting edge issues such as time poverty and its relationship to income poverty and the macroeconomic effects of recession and austerity while the microeconomic section studies topics such as differences by age activity sequencing and subjective well being of time spent The chapters also examine a range of age groups from the labor of school age children to elderly caregivers and analyze time use in Argentina Australia Canada China Finland India Korea South Africa Tanzania Turkey and the United States Each chapter provides a substantial introduction to the academic literature of its focus and is written to be revealing to researchers and accessible to students and policymakers
