Leadership Development in Saudi Arabia Fahad F.H. Alanazi, Charles Harvey, Tom McGovern, Mairi Maclean, 2025-06-30 Leadership Development in Saudi Arabia offers a comprehensive examination of the role of leadership development in expanding capabilities for national economic development accelerating realization of the ambitious goals of Vision 2030 the country s blueprint for socioeconomic transformation Based on nine case studies of leading Saudi companies this book explores how and why firms invest in leadership development and assesses its current state in Saudi Arabia It provides insights into both organizational talent building and the country s journey toward economic diversification The book stands out as one of the first contextually rich in depth studies of leadership development in a non Western context particularly within the ambitious framework of Saudi Arabia s Vision 2030 Through interviews with senior executives and leadership professionals the book provides actionable recommendations for improving leadership development practices Readers will benefit from detailed case studies and empirical data that highlight how leadership programs can drive business growth and national economic progress It is essential reading for academics leadership development professionals policymakers and business leaders interested in understanding how leadership development supports economic growth in Saudi Arabia and how it might play an even bigger role in the future It proposes developing fresh approaches to widening the pool of leadership talent building on the distinctive strengths of Islamic Leadership practices

Saudi Aramco Leadership Development and Succession Planning Suleman Amer Al-Bargan, 2002 Leadership Development in Saudi Arabia's Private Sector Khaled A.

Hanaky,2021 There is currently a proliferation of business focused leadership development programs in Saudi Arabia These programs represent a reaction to the shortage of qualified leaders who can drive and sustain both recent and future advances introduced by Saudi Vision 2030 the national transformation program that is introducing social and economic reforms Importantly business leadership development has not been studied in this context of contemporary Saudi Arabia This study examined the state of Saudi leadership development programs by employing an explanatory sequential case study design that focused on a particular leadership development program Through the use of surveys and participant interviews results revealed that most participants benefitted from the program and noticed growth in their leadership skills Results also suggested that participants found small group activities and strategic management to be the most effective program features Regression analysis results revealed significant positive correlations between participants growth in their leadership skills and the relevance of program content to their background and work as well as their engagement in program activities while a significant negative correlation was found between participants growth in leadership and their status as a parent While qualitative interview findings confirmed the first two findings they contradicted the parental finding suggesting that more research is needed in this area Interviews also pointed to some of the most valuable components of the program including the overall quality of training content and delivery interactivity and practicality of the program and participants ability to learn soft skills and change their perspectives Some areas of improvement were also discovered including enrollment criteria and the quality and comprehensiveness of program material such as readings The findings and recommendations from this study could benefit various stakeholders For instance organizations interested in these programs need to select people who are interested in learning and growing their skills Organizations also need to consider supplementary initiatives within the workplace to expand leadership development from individual to collective levels For trainers practicality and interactivity are key features for successful programs Finally many soft skills taught in these programs could be included into school curriculum to ensure future workers are better prepared

Exploring Transformational Leadership Sarah E. Jolley, 2015 While leadership development programs have a variety of intended outcomes personal transformation is a common outcome across most of these programs The purpose of this phenomenological study was to explore the process of transformation through a leadership development experience and describe what transformation looks like for individuals who experience it and identify what elements of the leadership development experience contribute to that transformation In depth interviews with ten individuals revealed nine key themes in the transformation process multiple experiences quality of the experience influence of curriculum and methodology application of learning experience of emotion challenge and support from others communication with others recognition of self and others and transformation of self and purpose This qualitative study also sought to examine how a leadership development experience can contribute to an individual s motivation and ability to exercise leadership that is transformational and for the common good These findings suggest that for a leadership development experience to do that the experience should focus on purpose leadership for a purpose that is bigger than any individual s or group s self interest progress making progress on issues as opposed to solving or fixing them which may be nearly impossible for some intractable community issues people individuals need others to provide sufficient challenge and adequate support both during and following their leadership development experience if transformation is to occur and practice individuals need opportunities to practice applying what they learn in a safe environment and the leadership development classroom can serve as an appropriate environment in which that practice can take place

Strategic Leadership Development Abel Amy Lui, Rebecca L. Leadership and employee performance in the petroleum industry of Saudi Arabia Muhammad Sajid Saeed, 2016-04-22 Scientific Study from the year 2015 in the subject Business economics Business Management Corporate Governance language English abstract This research will focus on a critical assessment of leadership and employee performance in oil and gas sector of Saudi Arabia by taking into account three top petroleum companies To achieve this aim the following list of objectives are formed To evaluate the link between employee performance and leadership in selected organisations To discover how leadership patterns affect employees performance To explore the impact of leadership style on employees productivity To investigate the factors affecting the performance of employees in selected organisation Saudi Arabia as a nation is presently facing a quick increase in the number of entrepreneurs who establish businesses related to wholesales maintenance and production industries in local areas These businesses are increasing the expectations and interactions between the entrepreneur and employees on a daily basis Due to this fact the study will be of a huge importance in a number of ways

- 1 It will help expose the relationship between organisational performance and leadership and how leadership techniques could be useful for petroleum industries to manage the environmental influences and differences
- 2 It will be useful for students of business administration who may become entrepreneurs managers and leaders in the future
- 3 The study will also help the leaders and the managements of the petroleum industry become aware of the factors that really motivate their workers in high and low productivity in their work

Similarly it is expected that when the implications are prepared and applied between employees and leaders in the organisation it would enhance improvement and co operation in individual s performance and would also increase the interpersonal relationship and high productivity significantly Other organisational issues such as aggression fixation stress regression and friction between leaders and employees would also be reduced
