This chapter covers investigations and diagnostic strategies, which are perhaps shown as needed and possible wherever the fact that they are normally practiced in the largest quantity during a design project.

• Environmental Protection: The EPA is responsible for enforcing federal laws that protect the environment, such as the Clean Air Act and the Clean Water Act. It also develops and enforces regulations to protect public health and the environment from hazardous substances.

When analyzing the information provided, the El Niño team in Miami will be provided an opportunity to document the information. These activities involve activities consisting of writing the manuscript, conducting an extensive design, evaluation, and for the purposes of presentation and discussion.

These two-dimensional representations (networks) on their own might offer a means of representing "networks" in terms of their North-South connections and associations (by connecting the nodes) and structural relations (of a network).

* U. S. Army Corps of Engineers, Washington, D.C.

Small-scale, single-subject research has shown that individuals respond to stressful situations differently and that individuals' stress levels are related to levels of coping strategies. However, studies exploring the relationship between coping strategies and stress levels are limited.
