The Governance of Daily Life in Africa Giorgio Blundo, Pierre-Yves Le Meur, 2008-11-30 Anchored in an empirically grounded anthropology this book explores the notion of governance in a non normative way It describes and analyses the institutional and political processes through which social actors and groups be they state private or third sector contribute to the provision of public and collective goods or services The book draws on case studies from Anglophone and Francophone Africa crossing anthropological traditions that have too often evolved in parallel directions and dealing with a range of topics such as health water supply sanitation and waste management security humanitarian aid land issues and decentralisation Beyond African boundaries it contributes to current debates about governmentality public policy subject making public private boundaries and the role of the state

Struggling for Health in the City Brigit Obrist, 2006 For international experts health is a comprehensive concept closely linked to bodily material spiritual and social well being But what does health mean to women living in a poor neighborhood of an African city Women in Dar es Salaam see health as primarily related to livelihood hygiene and care To stay healthy one has to fulfill basic needs for food water and shelter to keep the body and home clean and to take good care of the family Since the state and newly privatized services hardly reach them and husbands often fail in their role as breadwinners women bear a growing burden in daily health practice They become increasingly vulnerable unless they manage to create a new balance by improving their knowledge becoming economically more independent and raising support within the household in social networks and organizations By shifting the focus from illness to local meanings of health and vulnerability anthropology can make a unique contribution to the rapidly expanding field of urban health research Such an actor centered approach provides fascinating insights and fosters innovative theoretical debates for both scholars and practitioners With regard to medical anthropology this study opens new lines of inquiry which may eventually lead to an anthropology of health

Disaster Risk Reduction Mark Pelling, Ben Wisner, 2012-05-16 Published with ProVention Consortium UNDP and UN Habitat This excellent book is essential reading for those concerned with urban risk and its reduction in Africa the most rapidly urbanizing region of the world Professor Jo Beall Development Studies Institute London School of Economics At last a book that recognizes the impacts of disasters on Africa's 350 million urban dwellers including the many disasters that get overlooked and go unrecorded But also a book that through careful case studies shows what creates disaster risk and what local measures can be taken to address it David Satterthwaite International Institute for Environment and Development IIED This innovative volume combines the latest conceptualisations of urban disaster risk and vulnerability with case studies from across the African continent on how existing and innovative information can inform efforts to address the problems Coverage ranges from the major catastrophes of news headlines to small everyday disasters with which poor urban residents have to cope in their survival strategies Written by international authorities and local specialists this extremely useful book should find a place in the hands of academics and practitioners alike Professor David Simon Department of Geography Royal Holloway University of London This is a one of a kind book packed with original research and offering an innovative way of thinking about the reduction of risk in rapidly urbanizing cities across the globe It is a must have for professionals researchers and policy makers The book addresses four inter related themes critical for urban risk reduction environment livelihood urban governance and the generation of urban risks Its focus is on Africa the most rapidly urbanizing world region but it illustrates global processes Part one reviews development urbanization and disaster risk in Africa as a whole identifies state of the art practices and policies for building urban resilience and provides a tool kit for urban risk reduction It also presents a powerful conceptual framework to analyse and compare disaster risk and resilience in different cities and communities Part two presents detailed case studies from Algeria Ghana Senegal Kenya Tanzania and South Africa illustrating vulnerability to hazards ranging from earthquake to shack fire environmental health hazards traffic hazards and flooding Part three looks to the future and outlines a vision for a safer urban Africa based on achieving gains in human security through inclusive governance and investment in the creative capacities of Africa s urban dwellers With foreword by Anna Tibaijuka Executive Director UN HABITAT From King George V Memorial Museum to House of Culture Paul Msemwa,2005 Climate Change Adaptation and Development Tor Håkon Inderberg,Siri Eriksen,Karen O'Brien,Linda Sygna,2014-11-20 Climate change poses multiple challenges to development It affects lives and livelihoods infrastructure and institutions as well as beliefs cultures and identities There is a growing recognition that the social dimensions of vulnerability and adaptation now need to move to the forefront of development policies and practices This book presents case studies showing that climate change is as much a problem of development as for development with many of the risks closely linked to past present and future development pathways Development policies and practices can play a key role in addressing climate change but it is critical to question to what extent such actions and interventions reproduce rather than address the social and political structures and development pathways driving vulnerability The chapters emphasise that adaptation is about much more than a set of projects or interventions to reduce specific impacts of climate change it is about living with change while also transforming the processes that contribute to vulnerability in the first place This book will help students in the field of climate change and development to make sense of adaptation as a social process and it will provide practitioners policymakers and researchers working at the interface between climate change and development with useful insights for approaching adaptation as part of a larger transformation to sustainability A Road to Sustainable Solid Waste Management in Tanzania Hussein Mohamed Omar (Ph.D.),2023-01-05 Solid Waste Management SWM has become one of the most serious environmental and public health issues confronting cities in developing countries Rapid urbanization economic growth and changes in lifestyles and consumption patterns have resulted in a remarkable increase in waste volume and diversity during the past few decades In Tanzania the annual waste generation is about 7 million tons per year However the waste collection rate has remained below 35% Lack of waste management plans poor waste management governance inadequate Refuse Collection Charges RCCs management inadequate enforcement and unpredictable policies are among the waste management bottlenecks discussed in this book Further the book explores the strategies necessary for the improvement of waste management practices in Tanzania including waste minimization through the Reduce Reuse and Recycling 3Rs concept effective recycling for both market and non marketable waste Stakeholders Engagement the least cost disposal option and effective waste management financing

The role of households in solid waste management in East Africa capital cities Aisa Oberlin Solomon, 2023-09-04 Household solid waste management is a severe problem in East Africa capital cities Domestic actors tend to be neglected in their role in solving the problem This book develops a new conceptual framework for analyzing the role of households in solid waste management in East Africa s capital cities This conceptual framework is derived from the theory of the Modernized Mixture Approach By focusing on households in informal settlements in particular domestic routines for handling wastes are analyzed for their technical and social dimensions By elaborating upon the technical and social aspects of domestic solid wastes and the role of householders in producing and handling these wastes this book adds to the scanty body of scientific knowledge of sustainable waste management by householders in East African countries The knowledge generated with respect to technical and social dimensions can be used in the future by researchers and policy makers in SWM policies both in East Africa and comparable situations elsewhere in the world
