THE SHAKERS TIMELINE

1747: The Wardley society, from which the Shakers emerged, formed as a distinct group in Manchester, England.

1773: Ann Lee assumed leadership in the group.

1774: Nine Shakers, including Ann Lee, her brother William and her husband Abraham Standerin, sailed to America, following God's command received by "Mother Ann."

1776: The first settlement at Niskeyuna, New York was established.

1784: Ann Lee died, following a successful two-year missionary tour of New England. James Whittaker took over as the sect's leader.

1787: James Whittaker died and was succeeded by Joseph Meacham. Under Meacham, the United Society assumed a communal organization and scattered believers were "gathered" into villages.

1796: Lucy Wright succeeded Meacham as the sect's leader. She later founded a four-member collective leadership institution, the Ministry.

Late 1700s – early 1800s: Various aspects of Shaker doctrine, ritual and everyday life were codified and institutionalized.

1806–1824: Several villages were established in Kentucky, Ohio and Indiana, following a mission to the west.

1837–c. 1850: The "Era of Manifestations," a period of intense religious revival swept through Shaker settlements.

Mid-1800s: The United Society reached its peak population of around 4,500, living in more than twenty villages.

Late 1800s: The processes of depopulation, feminization and other forms of decline began and had continued until mid-twentieth century.

1959: With the closing of Hancock, Massachusetts, the last two Shaker villages remained in Canterbury, New Hampshire and Sabbathday Lake, Maine.
