

Let's make a use of intelligence for human profit

Why should you trust in machine learning and not your gut?

How Signals work?

Build algorithmic models with no programming skills

Signals is a platform that allows you to build algorithmic trading models without any programming skills. You can create models based on various indicators and strategies, and then test them on historical data to see how they perform.

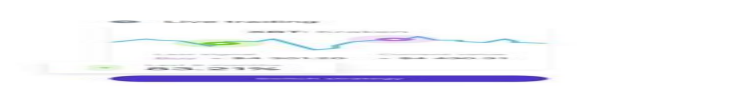

Test your trading model to generate profits

Once you have built a trading model, you can test it on historical data to see how it performs. This allows you to identify any weaknesses in your model and make adjustments before you start trading with real money.

Train your model before spending any money

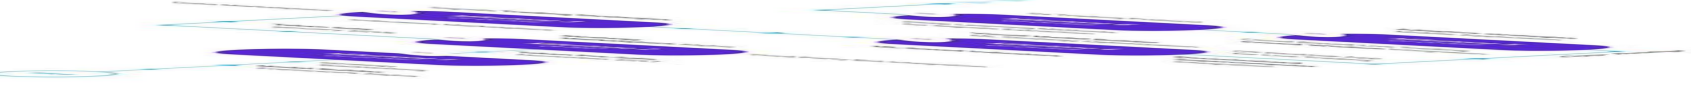

Before you start trading with real money, you should first train your model on historical data. This allows you to see how the model performs in different market conditions and to make any necessary adjustments.

Share and monetize your trading strategy

Once you have a profitable trading strategy, you can share it with other traders on the Signals platform. This allows you to monetize your strategy and earn a passive income.
