ABSTRACT

Background: Postnatal period is a vulnerable time, because most maternal and new born deaths occur during this period, especially immediately after childbirth. Postnatal care in the first hours and days after childbirth could prevent the great majority of these deaths. The objective of study was to assess the utilization of post-natal care and associated factors for low utilization in urban area of Jabalpur district.

Methods: A community based cross-sectional study was carried 360 mothers who delivered in last one year in urban area of Jabalpur district. Sampling method was multistage sampling method. A total 36 wards with 10 mothers from each ward was selected. The questionnaire included information related to mode of delivery, post-natal checkups and visits of health care providers.

Results: Among 360 mothers, 93.9% mothers received first postnatal check-up within 24 hrs, 1.11% of mothers between 2-3 days and 1.67% of mothers received first postnatal check-up between 4-7 days while 3.33% of mothers didn't receive any postnatal check-up. Regarding number of post-natal visits, 58.33% mothers received 3 or more postnatal visits, 35% of mother received 2 PNC visits, while 3.3% did not receive a single postnatal visit. The education of mothers, joint type of family, high socioeconomic status, early registration of pregnancy, minimum 4 ANC visits and institutional deliveries were found significantly associated with utilization of postnatal check-up.

Conclusions: Utilization of postnatal services is still poor in the urban areas even though the physical accessibility was adequate. In the present study, it was concluded that the role of education, especially of female education, is important contributing factor associated with utilization of postnatal care.

Globally, over 500,000 women die around child birth every year, with over 90% of the deaths occurring in the developing countries, most of the deaths occur during or immediately after childbirth.^{1,2} Postnatal period is a six-week interval between birth of a new born and the return of the reproductive organs to their normal non-pregnant state.³ The timing of postnatal care is also crucial to the well-being of the mother and baby. The studies have shown that some 50% of maternal deaths and 40% of neonatal deaths occur within 24 hours after birth, also known as the 'immediate postnatal period'.^{1,4}

WHO recommends that women, who have delivered in a health facility, should receive PNC for at least 24 hours after birth. If a birth is at home, the first postnatal contact should be as early as possible within 24 hours of birth. Three additional PNC contacts are recommended on day 3, between days 7-14 after birth and 6 weeks after birth.⁴ There are few data on early postnatal care specifically. Still, many women who give birth in facilities, are

Addressing Contemporary Public Health Challenges in Ghana for Improved Outcomes: Getting to SDG 3 Delanyo

Dovlo,Kwasi Torpey, Irene Agyepong,Evelyn Ansah,Eugene Nyarko,2024-12-24 In 1978 Ghana was a participant in the Alma Ata meeting on primary health care and was an early adopter of its ideals However like most developing countries it has made efforts to strengthen public health as a way of ensuring the conditions in which its people can be healthy and productive The evolution of the public health in the country involved core assessments policy development and the implementation of interventions to address its policy objectives The process of strengthening public health policy and interventions over the past four and more decades has hinged on evidence generated through research at the local and international level. The documentation of interventions to address contemporary health issues is a critical plank for the health practice to policy continuum. It catalyzes the country response of the myriads of public health issues confronting it. Many lessons have accrued for the country's communities to enhance the promotion, restoration, and maintenance of health even as the disease burden evolves from one of infectious and communicable diseases and maternal and child health to an increasingly sophisticated triple burden incorporating non-communicable diseases.
