Subcommittee on Commerce, Justice, Science, and Related Agencies, 2017 Colorado School of Mines Research, 2016 The Development of Propulsion Technology for U.S. Space-Launch Vehicles, 1926-1991 J. D. Hunley, 2013-03-15 In this definitive study J D Hunley traces the program's development from Goddard's early rockets and the German V 2 missile through the Titan IVA and the Space Shuttle with a focus on space launch vehicles. Since these rockets often evolved from early missiles, he pays considerable attention to missile technology not as an end in itself but as a contributor to launch vehicle technology. Focusing especially on the engineering culture of the program, Hunley communicates this very human side of technological development by means of anecdotes, character sketches, and case studies of problems faced by rocket engineers. He shows how such a highly adaptive approach enabled the evolution of a hugely complicated technology that was impressive but decidedly not rocket science. Unique in its single volume coverage of the evolution of launch vehicle technology from 1926 to 1991, this meticulously researched work will inform scholars and engineers interested in the history of technology and innovation as well as those specializing in the history of space flight.

S. Military, U. S. Air Force (USAF), 45th Space Wing History Office, World Spaceflight News, U. S. Government, 2017-12-03 This study addresses ATLAS V and DELTA IV Evolved Expendable Launch Vehicle (EELV) operations at Cape Canaveral, Florida. It features all the EELV missions launched from the Cape through the end of Calendar Year (CY) 2009. In addition, the first chapter provides an overview of the EELV effort in the 1990s, summaries of EELV contracts and requests for facilities at Cape Canaveral, deactivation and/or reconstruction of launch complexes 37 and 41 to support EELV operations, typical EELV flight profiles, and military supervision of EELV space operations. The lion's share of this work highlights EELV launch campaigns and the outcome of each flight through the end of 2009. To avoid confusion, ATLAS V missions are presented in Chapter II and DELTA IV missions appear in Chapter III. Furthermore, missions are placed in three categories within each chapter: 1 commercial, 2 civilian agency, and 3 military space operations. All EELV customers employ commercial launch contractors to put their respective payloads into orbit. Consequently, the type of agency sponsoring a payload—the Air Force, NASA, NOAA, or a commercial satellite company—determines where its mission summary is placed. CHAPTER I EELV PROGRAM OVERVIEW
