

PART I
CHAPTER 1

HUMAN GEOGRAPHY : NATURE AND SCOPE

Difference between physical geography and human geography:

Physical geography studies physical environment and human geography studies "the relationship between the physical/natural and the human worlds, the spatial distributions of human phenomena and how they come about, the social and economic differences between different parts of the world".

Definitions of human geography:

- "Human geography is the synthetic study of relationship between human societies and earth's surface". Ratzel
- "Human geography is the study of "the changing relationship between the unresting man and the unstable earth." Ellen C. Semple

NATURE OF HUMAN GEOGRAPHY

Human geography studies the inter-relationship between the physical environment and socio-cultural environment created by human beings through mutual interaction with each other. While physical environment has been greatly modified by human beings, it has also, in turn, impacted human lives.

Naturalisation of Humans and Humanisation of Nature

Human beings interact with their physical environment with the help of technology. It is not important what human beings produce and create but it is extremely important 'with the help of what tools and techniques do they produce and create'. Technology indicates the level of cultural development of society. Human beings were able to develop technology after they developed better understanding of natural laws.

Environmental determinism

- Frederick Ratzel and Carl Ritter were the main advocates of this idea.
- They consider man as a passive agent in the development of his character.
- The point of view is that the physical environment controls the course of human action.
