

GDPR: Best practice Implementation Guide

Transforming GDPR Requirements into Compliant Operational Behaviours

Introduction

The General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR) is a revolutionary change in Data Protection and will in all likelihood become the de-facto gold standard for Data Protection regulation globally. The two areas most influential in this regard relate to Accountability and Enforcement.

1. Accountability: Organisations must embrace the new accountability principle introduced by the GDPR and move from 'theory to practice' in terms of their Data Protection efforts.
2. Enforcement: The member state Data Protection Authorities (DPAs) must rigorously enforce the Regulation by issuing substantive penalties where organisations cannot adequately evidence compliance with the GDPR accountability principle.

One of the biggest challenges for organisations that fall within the broad extra-territorial scope of GDPR, is transforming the legal requirements of GDPR into compliant and sustainable operational behaviours. Whilst there will be many organisations, such as those in the financial services and healthcare sectors, who are used to dealing with regulatory requirements, there are many others who will be experiencing the challenge of implementing strict regulatory requirements for the first time. Experienced or not, the May 25 deadline in 2018 is fast approaching and action needs to be taken now by all organisations within the scope of GDPR.

The GDPR Accountability Principle

Recognition of the need for accountability in terms of data privacy is not new and can be seen in the privacy guidelines issued by the Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD) back in 1980.

The OECD describes accountability as "showing how responsibility is exercised and making it verifiable"

The intent of the new GDPR Accountability Principle, as defined in Article 5(2) of the GDPR text, is similar to that of the OECD privacy guidelines. It is seeking to reaffirm and strengthen the responsibility of Data Controllers and Data Processors, in relation to Processing of Personal Data, and requiring them to demonstrate compliance with measures which give effect to the other six GDPR principles (listed below).

GDPR Principle	Description
Lawfulness, fairness and transparency	Processed lawfully, fairly and in a transparent manner
Purpose limitation	Collected for specified, explicit and legitimate purposes and not further Processed in an incompatible manner
Data minimisation	Adequate, relevant and limited to what is necessary
Accuracy	Kept accurate and up-to-date.
Storage limitation	Not kept, any longer than necessary, in a form which permits identification of a Data Subject.
Integrity and confidentiality	Appropriate security ensuring protection against unauthorised or unlawful Processing and against accidental loss, destruction or damage

The European Data Protection Supervisor (EDPS) has stated, in reference to accountability, that "EU institutions and bodies should, at the most senior level, endorse and take responsibility for Personal
