

Session Topics - Tactical, Attacking, 4-3-3, Systems of Play

This is a session conducted by Randy Waldrum during the Nebraska WORLD CLASS COACHING International Coaching Seminar. Waldrum has been the Head Coach of Notre Dame University since 1999. In his 12 seasons, Waldrum had won more than 75% of the games his team has played. This session focuses on how Waldrum's team attacks in a 4-3-3 formation.

First Pattern

Seven players are positioned on the field. The seven players are set up with three midfield players in the shape of a triangle (two attacking and one defending), three forwards, and one supporting player behind the midfielders. The drill begins with the target player (player with the ball) passing it in to the wide attacker on the right. The team needs to then quickly switch the ball to the opposite side attacker with clean possession as quickly as possible. Alternate sides.

Coaching Point

Focus on strong crisp passes that are accurate and appropriate. Make sure that players are keeping their shape when possessing and shifting from one side to the other.

Second Pattern

The function is the same as previous, except the players look to go to goal. Place a goalkeeper in the goal. The players must use the restraining line (dotted line) as an off sides line.

Coaching Points

- We don't care how other teams defend, we want to teach players what to do
- Emphasize after the attack that the players need to get their shape back behind the restraining line as quickly as possible.

Third Pattern

Change the drill by adding three defenders and two defending midfielders. If the defending team wins possession, then they look to pass the ball to the back player that begins the possession. The back player becomes a target player and plays with the team with possession. Once the defending team plays into the target player, then possession goes back to the attacking team. Alternate sides.
