Stephane Safin,2025-09-09 Architectural design relies on distinct cognitive processes that have been the subject of research for several decades However in light of recent social and technological shifts reshaping the discipline there is a pressing need for new insights to better understand how these changes influence the design process This collective work offers an overview of research in the field opening up perspectives towards an ever finer understanding of the cognitive processes involved in architectural design design neuroscience uses induced or offered by building information modeling BIM information retrieval representational processes AI in ideation and the values and processes used in active participation

Cognitive Activities in Architectural Design is aimed at researchers in the design sciences seeking a deeper understanding of design processes architectural teachers looking to reflect on and enhance their teaching practices and practitioners interested in how scientific research can define and conceptualize their professional work

Intelligent Buildings: An Introduction Derek Clements-Croome, 2013-10-08 This book introduces the concept of Intelligent Buildings to the wider construction community Edited by the Father of Intelligent Buildings Derek Clements Croome the book explains that intelligent buildings should be sustainable healthy technologically aware meet the needs of occupants and business and should be flexible and adaptable to deal with change This means the processes of planning design construction commissioning and facilities management including post occupancy evaluation are all important Buildings comprise many systems devised by many people and yet the relationship between buildings and people can only work satisfactorily if there is an integrated team with a holistic vision
