

Chapter 3

Bank Reconciliation

Learning Objectives

1. Prepare a bank reconciliation.
2. Prepare a proof of cash.

Bank Reconciliation Statement

A bank reconciliation statement is a report that is prepared for the purpose of bringing the balances of cash (a) per records and (b) per bank statement into agreement.

More specifically, bank reconciliations are prepared to:

- a. explain the difference between the cash balance in the accounting records and the cash balance reported on the bank statement;
- b. arrive at the adjusted (correct) cash balance to be shown in the financial statements; and
- c. provide information for reconciling journal entries.

Bank reconciliation is prepared monthly, immediately upon receipt of the monthly bank statement from the bank.

A bank statement is a report issued by a bank that shows the deposits and withdrawals during the period and the cumulative balance of a depositor's bank account.

When a business has more than one bank account, separate bank reconciliations are made for each of those accounts.

Bank reconciliations are normally required only for checking accounts. Theoretically, bank reconciliation is not required for savings accounts because no checks can be drawn from them. Withdrawals are updated immediately on both cash records and bank passbook. Reconciling items for savings accounts are usually limited to interest income earned.
