Biology of the Peregrine and Gyrfalcon in Greenland William A. Burnham, William G. Mattox, 1984
 A ten year study began in 1972 in West Greenland to investigate the breeding biology of the peregrine falcon. Data on nesting gyrfalcons were also collected. Thirty four peregrine nesting sites were examined in the 6050 km² inland study area near Søndre Strømfjord. Limited research also centered in Disko Bugt and Frederikshavn. Peregrines were found nesting predominantly on high south facing cliffs which overlooked large areas. The mean minimum distance between peregrine eyries was 7.7 km for the inland area 1972 and 1973 and 55 km for the coast 1974. Approximately 60 percent of the inland nesting sites were occupied each year. A ten year average production of 1.90 young per occupied site and 2.78 young per successful site was determined. Lapland longspurs, snow buntings, wheatears and redpolls comprised 90 percent of the peregrines diet. Raven nests and prey availability may be the most significant factor affecting falcon density. Addled peregrine eggs, eggshell fragments and peregrine prey species were collected. Whole eggs averaged 14.3 ppm wet weight, 305 ppm lipid weight DDE while eggshell measurements showed a 16 percent thinning compared with pre 1940 eggs from Greenland. Prey species carried low levels of DDE. The peregrine population appears to be at a near critical contamination level and a small increase in DDE level could contribute to a population decline. No indication of a decline has been observed during the study and the population appears stable. The project banded 185 peregrines from which 8 recoveries occurred. The recoveries suggest peregrines migrate south to winter in South America.

Gyrfalcon Emma Ford, 1999. The gyrfalcon is the largest, fastest and arguably the most beautiful falcon in the world. For centuries man has been driven to acquire live specimens from their Arctic territory for sport and even as currency. This is a study of the species using drawings, sketches, paintings and photographs. The author examines the gyrfalcon's role in natural history, its place in literature and its long established use in falconry.

The Gyrfalcon Eugene Potapov, Evgenii Potapov, 2005. This book is the first monograph on one of the most beautiful and admired birds in the world. The Gyrfalcon is the world's largest and most powerful falcon, a truly awe-inspiring bird which inhabits the ferociously inhospitable Arctic taiga from Greenland and Iceland right across Siberia and northern Canada. Its plumage varies from a dark mottled grey to pure white; the white birds in particular are coveted by birders and falconers. Like other titles in the series, it covers all aspects of the species: biology, taxonomy, distribution, status and historical associations with mankind. The result is an exhaustively researched and enthrallingly readable biography of a spectacular bird, illustrated throughout with photographs and line drawings, a good read presenting much previously inaccessible information as well as some interesting insights into some of the most remote and inhospitable places on earth. British Birds, Bloomsbury Publishing.
