Hemophilia: THE "ROYAL" DISEASE

Hemophilia is an inherited disorder. Those who suffer from it lack a necessary protein that allows their blood to clot. A classic example of how hemophilia is passed on from generation to generation is found in the royal families of Europe during the 1800's and early 1900's. This pedigree details the inheritance of hemophilia in the descendants of Queen Victoria (1819-1901) of England. Carefully study the pedigree and answer the questions that follow.

1. What is the pattern of inheritance shown by hemophilia in the royal families of Europe? _____
2. Briefly justify your answer for the pattern listed above. Why did you choose this type of inheritance? _____
3. Queen Victoria was the first person that hemophilia could be traced back to, although she did not show it herself. What must her genotype have been? _____
4. Leopold was Victoria's only son affected by hemophilia. What must his genotype have been? _____
5. Currently, none of the royal families of Europe show hemophilia. However, the Spanish lineage could still produce the disease. Why is this statement true? Use any necessary terms to help clarify your position. _____
