Chapter 30

The War to End War

1917–1918

The world must be made safe for democracy. Its peace must be planted on the tested foundations of political liberty. We have no selfish ends to achieve. Our deepest wish is to secure the peace of the world. We seek no indemnities for our sacrifices and losses. We desire no conquest, no dominion. We seek no indemnities for our sacrifices and losses. We desire no conquest, no dominion. We seek no indemnities for our sacrifices and losses.

WOODROW WILSON, War Message, April 2, 1917

Destiny dealt cruelly with Woodrow Wilson. The lover of peace, as fate would have it, was forced to lead a hesitant and peace-loving nation to war. As the last days of 1916 slipped through the fingers, the president made one final, futile attempt at mediation between the embittered belligerents. On January 22, 1917, he delivered one of his most moving addresses, restating America's commitment to neutrality and declaring that only a negotiated "peace without victory" would prove durable. Germany's warlords responded with a blow of the fist. On January 31, 1917, they announced to an astonished world their decision to wage unrestricted submarine warfare, sinking all ships, including America's merchant ships.

Was this rash act? War with America was the last thing Germany wanted. But after three ghastly years of trench warfare, Germany's leaders decided the distinction between combatants and noncombatants had become meaningless. The war without mercy had become a war of attrition. The Allies had broken through the German lines. The war without mercy had become a war of attrition. The Allies had broken through the German lines.

launched a filibuster to block the measure. Wilson denounced them as a "little group of willful men" who were rendering a great nation "helpless and contemptible." But their obstruction was a powerful reminder of the continuing strength of American isolationism. Meanwhile, the sensational Zimmermann Note was intercepted and published on March 1, 1917, infuriating Americans, especially westerners. The foreign secretary Arthur Zimmermann had secretly proposed a German-Mexican alliance, promising Mexico Texas, New Mexico, and Arizona. On the heels of this provocation came the dreaded "overt" acts in the Atlantic. German U-boats sank four unarmed American ships. In the first two weeks of the war, the difference between the newspapers was that now the Allies had broken through the German lines. The war without mercy had become a war of attrition. The Allies had broken through the German lines.
