Abstract

This study identifies and analyzes the determinants influencing China's foreign direct investment level in Indonesia. The independent variables in this study are economic growth, inflation rate, wage rate, exchange rate, and export value. The data used is time series data from 2000 - 2016. The analytical method used is multiple linear regression. The study results show that wage and inflation rates significantly affect the foreign investment level from China to Indonesia. The variables of economic growth, exchange rates, and exports do not affect the level of foreign investment from China to Indonesia. The simultaneous test results significantly influence all the independent variables used in this study. The implication for foreign direct investment is that the government must increase foreign investment in Indonesia to increase economic growth by improving the investment climate in the country by providing several facilities to assist foreign investors so that investors feel safe investing their capital in Indonesia and with synergy with monetary policy in lowering interest rates to increase investor interest in investing.

Keywords: Inflation Rate, Wage Rate, Exchange Rate, Export Value, Foreign Direct Investment

JEL Classification: O11, O16, O47

1. Introduction

One indicator of a country's prosperity can be seen in the amount of per capita income that country has (Lesmana, 2014). Per capita income can increase if there is an increase in real national income, reflected by economic growth. Therefore, every country tries to increase its production or national income through economic development to achieve its economic growth target (Azwar, 2016).

Some New Evidence on Determinants of Foreign Direct Investment in Developing Countries Harinder Singh, Kwang Woo Jun, 1995 The Determinants of Foreign Direct Investment Centre on Transnational Corporations (United Nations), 1992 Foreign Direct Investment and Human Development Olivier de Schutter, Johan F. M. Swinnen, Jan Wouters, 2013 This book presents original research that examines the growth of international investment agreements as a means to attract foreign direct investment FDI and considers how this affects the ability of capital importing countries to pursue their development goals The hope of countries signing such treaties is that foreign capital will accelerate transfers of technologies create employment and benefit the local economy through various types of linkages But do international investment agreements in fact succeed in attracting foreign direct investment And if so are the sovereignty costs involved worth paying In particular are these costs such that they risk undermining the very purpose of attracting investors which is to promote human development in the host country This book uses both economic and legal analysis to answer these questions that have become central to discussions on the impact of economic globalization on human rights and human development It explains the dangers of developing countries being tempted to signal their willingness to attract investors by providing far reaching protections to investors rights that would annul or at least seriously diminish the benefits they have a right to expect from the arrival of FDI It examines a variety of tools that could be used by capital exporting countries and by capital importing countries alike to ensure that FDI works for development and that international investment agreements contribute to that end This uniquely interdisciplinary study located at the intersection of development economics international investment law and international human rights is written in an accessible language and should attract the attention of anyone who cares about the role of private investment in supporting the efforts of poor countries to climb up the development ladder

Foreign Direct Investment Yingqi Wei, V. N. Balasubramanyam, 2004-01-01 This book consists of detailed case studies of foreign direct investment FDI in China India Ireland Malaysia Mexico and Sub Saharan Africa providing a critical review of the determinants and impact of FDI on growth and development employment technology transfer and trade The expert contributors examine a range of controversial issues including the contribution of the relatively large volume of FDI in China to its growth whether India should fully liberalise its FDI regime and the impact of Mexico s membership of NAFTA on the volume of FDI it has attracted Malaysia s economic policies which appear to have attracted relatively large volumes of FDI but failed to generate the hoped for transmission of technology and skills are also questioned along with the role of corruption in limiting the contribution of FDI to achieving social goals in Sub Saharan Africa The impressive record of the Irish Republic in attracting and harnessing FDI to development objectives is examined closely and provides a detailed analysis of policies likely to promote efficient utilisation of FDI
