

Teamwork Assignment 3: ANSWER KEY

1. True or False: According to Ronald Sandler, an environmental virtue ethic is a necessary component of any complete environmental ethic. (1 pt.)

True: Sandler argues that even those who support environmental consequentialism or deontology need to develop an environmental ethic of virtue, as well, because people need guidance on how to develop good character with regard to their interactions with the natural environment. (According to environmental consequentialism or deontology, though, an environmental virtue ethic would provide a strictly instrumental role in leading people to do the right thing more reliably.)

2. What is a virtue? (Select one.) 2 pts.
- a. Any disposition to behave in certain ways, given a range of circumstances.
 - b. Any character trait.
 - c. A pattern of behaviors.
 - d. A behavioral and emotional disposition or character trait that people should have.

d. is the right answer here.

3. What is the term for the opposite of a virtue? (2 pts.)

Vice

4. What is not a way of "specifying" environmental virtue, according to Ronald Sandler? (Select one.) 2 pts.
- a. Determining what character traits, related to our interactions with nature, benefit us
 - b. Determining what character traits environmental role models have
 - c. Determining what makes humans do well or flourish as members of biotic communities
 - d. Determining what character traits make someone a good or decent person

d. is the right answer because it's too general to be a way of specifying environmental virtue, in particular.
