

Cloak Board Method

Several Days Before You Graft:

Original Hive

Instructions:

The hive selected for a cloak board queen rearing must be a strong double brood hive with brood, honey and pollen in upper box. Double check to ensure you have uncapped brood in upper box. This will draw nurse bees into the upper box. If no flow is on, add pollen and feed.

Several days before you plan on grafting, flip the hive 180 degrees and close the front entrance. Move the queen to the bottom box and add a queen excluder. You can add the cloak board frame at this time as well and it will create a new entrance just below second box. It is suggested that you do not use this method if you have a hive right beside it. The bees may drift to the hive standing beside it before finding the new entrance one box up. It will take a day or so to adjust to the new entrance.

The Day Before You Graft:

Instructions:

The day before you graft, push in the divider so the upper box becomes completely separated from the bottom box. This creates a queenless hive on top and the bees will want to create a queen.

The bottom entrance on opposite side can now be opened to allow bees to feed brood in the bottom box. Most bees are now using the top entrance and going into the top super.

Turn Hive 180 Degrees

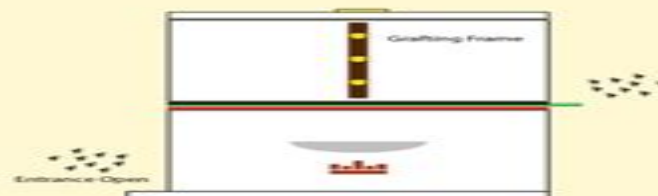

Slide in Divider

Day 1 Add in the Grafts:

Instructions:

Add in your grafts to the center of the top box. You will need to remove a frame to make room for it. You can remove a frame of uncapped brood and install in another colony.

Check if the bees have started queen cells and remove them if you find any.

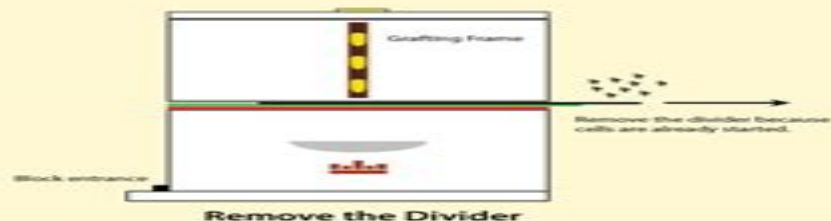

Day 2 Remove the Divider:

Instructions:

Once your cells are started, remove the divider making your hive queenright. This can be done the 24 hours after grafting. Block the bottom entrance again because you want all returning bees to go into upper box.

Since the cells are started, the bees will finish off the cells. You should have a high population of bees attending to the cells.
