The State of Food and Agriculture 2023 Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, 2023-11-06

Agrifood systems generate significant benefits to society including the food that nourishes us and jobs and livelihoods for over a billion people. However, their negative impacts due to unsustainable business as usual activities and practices are contributing to climate change, natural resource degradation, and the unaffordability of healthy diets. Addressing these negative impacts is challenging because people, businesses, governments, and other stakeholders lack a complete picture of how their activities affect economic, social, and environmental sustainability when they make decisions on a day-to-day basis. The State of Food and Agriculture 2023 looks into the true cost of food for sustainable agrifood systems. The report introduces the concept of hidden environmental, health, and social costs and benefits of agrifood systems and proposes an approach, true cost accounting (TCA), to assess them. To operationalize the TCA approach, the report proposes a two-phase assessment process: first, relying on national-level TCA assessments to raise awareness and then moving towards in-depth and targeted evaluations to prioritize solutions and guide transformative actions. It provides a first attempt at national-level assessments for 154 countries, suggesting that global hidden costs from agrifood systems amount to at least 10 trillion 2020 PPP dollars. The estimates indicate that low-income countries bear the highest burden of the hidden costs of agrifood systems relative to national income. Despite the preliminary nature of these estimates, the analysis reveals the urgent need to factor hidden costs into decision-making for the transformation of agrifood systems. Innovations in research and data, alongside investments in data collection and capacity building, are needed to scale the application of TCA, especially in low and middle-income countries, so that it can become a viable tool to inform decision-making and policymaking in a transparent and consistent way.

Determining key research areas for healthier diets and sustainable food systems in Viet Nam Jessica E. Raneri, Gina Kennedy, Trang Nguyen, Sigrid Wertheim-Heck, Ha Do, Stef de

Haan, Nguyen Phuong, 2019-10-10 Vietnamese food systems are undergoing rapid transformation with important implications for human and environmental health and economic development Poverty has decreased and diet quality and undernutrition have improved significantly since the end of the Doi Moi reform period 1986 1993 as a result of Viet Nam opening its economy and increasing its regional and global trade Yet poor diet quality is still contributing the triple burden of malnutrition with 25 percent stunting among children under age 5 26 percent and 29 percent of women and children respectively anemic and 21 percent of adults overweight Agricultural production systems have shifted from predominantly diverse smallholder systems to larger more commercialized and specialized systems especially for crops while the meatification of the Vietnamese diet is generating serious trade offs between improved nutrition and sustainability of the Vietnamese food systems The food processing industry has developed rapidly together with food imports resulting in new and processed food products penetrating the food retail outlets trending towards an increase in the Westernized consumption patterns that are shifting nutrition related problems towards overweight and obesity and with it an increase of non communicable disease related health risks While regulatory policies exist across the food system these are not systematically implemented making food safety a major concern for consumers and policy makers alike Where data exists it is not easy to aggregate with data from across food system dimensions making it difficult for Viet Nam to make an informed analysis of current and potential food system trade offs In our research we reviewed existing literature and data and applied a food systems framework to develop an initial food systems profile for Viet Nam and to identify a comprehensive set of research questions to fill current data gaps identified through the review Insights on these would provide the comprehensive evidence needed to inform policy makers on how to develop new food systems policies for Viet Nam and further refine and improve existing policies to achieve better quality diets and more sustainable food systems in Viet Nam Based on these we then engaged with stakeholders to develop research priorities in the Viet Nam context and identified 25 priority research questions This paper aims to stimulate such reflections by clearly outlining key areas for research government policy and development programs on priority investment to build the evidence base around inclusive food systems interventions that aim to result in healthier diets and more sustainable food systems for Viet Nam

The role of social protection in inclusive structural transformation Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, 2020-01-28 Structural transformation involves the reallocation of resources from less to more productive uses It involves growth in agricultural productivity and generation of higher productivity jobs in other sectors In addition in the longer term it can support poverty reduction However the transition process and its outcomes are frequently challenging especially among the poor and vulnerable people and households given the economic and social forces that pressure them to adapt to realities faster than they are able to The objective of the paper is to show how social protection policies and programmes can contribute to structural transformation smoothen the transition for the poor and vulnerable and facilitate changes in their livelihoods such that they are able to actively participate in the process of structural transformation Social protection interventions help households to engage in new economic activities generated by structural transformation allow them to better manage the risks of such transitions and provide a safety net for those who are not adequately equipped to adapt to the changing circumstances rapidly enough The paper draws from an extended review of the literature to assess how social protection influences human capital labor mobility reallocation of resources productive capital and access to technology The paper shows that the potential for major benefits from social protection in smoothening transitions and transforming the income generating activities and livelihoods of individuals and households is significant the actual impact however is smaller than actually desired or expected
