Questions in their whole or part reading activities are mostly used to check the students' comprehension about texts. They ought to challenge all levels of the students' comprehension: literal, inferential and evaluative. They are mostly written after texts in textbooks. However, not all textbooks take these levels of comprehension into account. This study investigated what levels of comprehension were challenged in the Bahasa Indonesia and English textbooks for Junior High School students and how teachers treat the questions in text books. It was found that in the Bahasa Indonesia textbook, 19.9 % of questions challenge literal comprehension level, 45.9% check inferential level and 34% examine evaluative ones. In the English textbooks, 42.9 % challenge the students' literal comprehension level and 52.7 rate inferential and only 4.2% positive evaluative ones. It was also found that most teachers treated the questions as they were. They scarcely modified them. These findings show in the textbooks the comprehension levels are not evenly challenged. The fact that literal level was not much used in Bahasa Indonesia might lead students guess the content of the texts without reading. Meanwhile in English textbooks, neglecting evaluative comprehension level might lead students to be uncritical. Therefore, it is recommended that textbook writers as well as teachers should be more cautious in generating questions so that all levels of comprehension are well presented.

In many language lessons, textbooks help teachers teach intensive reading. This lesson is aimed to help students to comprehend texts (Auerhoid and Field 1997 in Hodgcock and Ferris, 2009). They work simultaneously with the same texts and activities like re-reading the texts by answering comprehension questions (Hodgcock and Ferris 2009 p. 172). The questions function to check students' understanding (Nunan and Lamb, 1996 in Yang 2010). The students as readers are more likely to understand what they read when they are asked comprehension questions about the texts and receive immediate feedback about their answers (Bassell and Rasinski, 2008 p. 20).

Comprehension questions are expected not only to facilitate but also to challenge at least three levels of comprehension: literal, inferential and evaluative or critical.

Literal comprehension is level of understanding of a text wherein a reader has access and can recognize and recall details in the text (Bassell and Rasinski, 2008, p. 87). It requires recognition and recall of ideas, information and happening explicitly stated in the reading selection (Clymer, 1968 in Hudson, 2007 p. 83). The examples of them are finding date of flight, who is ...; what/where did she/he ...; what happened when or during ...; find out the differences between ... and ...?

Inferential or interpretative comprehension is the level of understanding wherein readers can read meanings which are not directly stated on the texts (Bassell and Rasinski, 2008, p. 17; Alexander, 1999; Harris & Glenda, 1985 in Setiadi, 2010 p. 92; Briskin, 2005). This level requires the orchestration and the manipulation of information from the text as well as within the readers (Bassell and Rasinski, 2008, p. 17). The questions are, for example, how did she converse with ...; what was the weather like; do you think ...; what will happen next etc.

Evaluative or critical comprehension refers to the understanding of a text which requires readers to use an adequately developed knowledge base (Carr and Thompson, 1999) and new information (Briskin, 2005) including prior knowledge, intuition, and imagination to make hypotheses (Pennell, 2002), to draw conclusions, to make reasonable predictions, connections between conclusions and critical judgments about what texts (Carr and Zimmerman, 1997 in Pennell, 2002; Clymer 1968 in Hudson, 2007 pp. 84-5; Bassell & Rasinski, 2008 p. 17). The examples of the questions are what strange ideas did ... have? why was ... true?, how do you feel about this character?, what do you think ...'s attitude?

An Investigation of Teachers' Questions and Tasks to Develop Reading Comprehension Ghazali Mustapha, 2020-02-03

Teachers are constantly seeking ways to improve their teaching and thereby enhance the learning of their students. One method of doing this is to bring critical and creative thinking skills to the forefront of the curriculum. This has been emphasized by the Malaysian Ministry of Education via the KBSM syllabus in order to teach critical and creative thinking by considering the use of programs like Bloom's taxonomy of educational objectives in classroom practice. This study demonstrates how the higher order skills can be integrated into the secondary school reading curriculum. The main aim of the study is to investigate how teachers design reading comprehension questions (RCQs) and reading comprehension tasks (RCTs) in relation to the demands of higher order thinking to produce students with critical minds. It focuses primarily on the use of COGAFF taxonomy, a cognitive affective taxonomy adapted from Bloom's and Krathwohl's, to formulate higher order reading questions and tasks as a means to develop critical and creative thinking skills. In a pilot study in Britain with forty Malaysian teachers and in the main field study in Malaysia 150 subjects (teachers and student teachers) have yielded about one thousand RCQs and one thousand RCTs. In line with many research findings of question and task design, 91.2% of the RCQs and 83.6% of RCTs produced during the pretest were of low order types. Subjects attended a workshop emphasizing question and task designing using the COGAFF taxonomy. Dramatically during the posttest, 74.4% of the RCQs and 80.6% of the RCTs were transformed into higher order inferential forms. The other major thrust of the study is to demonstrate how higher order questions can be used to design equally higher order tasks that can be utilized as a thinking skills approach in the teaching of reading comprehension lessons in secondary schools. Thinking tools and strategies as suggested by Beyer, Guilford, Gardner and several others and their implications for the teaching of reading comprehension and training of teachers in Malaysia are also discussed.

Treatment and Rehabilitation of the Chronic Alcoholic Benjamin Kissin,2012-12-06 The present volume contains a large variety of treatment approaches to the long term rehabilitation of the alcoholic ranging from the biological to the physiological to the psychological to the social The multiplicity of proposed therapies each of which has its strong proponents suggests that alcoholism is either a complex medical social disease syndrome requiring a multipronged treatment approach or a very simple illness for which we have not yet discovered the remedy The latter may indeed be true but we cannot use what we do not know and must use what we do know We do however have the obligation to be responsible in our treatment to provide the best that is known at this time and to be discriminating in our prescription of appropriate treatment for individual patients If there is one conclusion we would like to offer in our preface it is that alcoholics constitute a markedly heterogeneous population with widely disparate needs for whom at least at our present level of knowledge a broad spectrum of treatment modalities is necessary If this is true then probably most of this book has validity With this volume on the treatment and rehabilitation of the chronic alcoholic we bring to completion our five volume series The Biology of Alcoholism As the title of the present volume indicates we have departed from our original intention to deal solely with biological aspects of the syndrome and have attempted rather to produce a more comprehensive work Theology of Ministry
