Advocacy And Competition Policy:

The Limits of Competition Policy A. E. Rodriguez, Ashok Menon, 2010-01-01 What the authors offer is a thoroughgoing analysis clearly demonstrating that whatever economic path developing countries pursue imposing Western style antitrust regimes will engender uncertainty chill economic behaviour and foster an unhealthy climate for business They employ the influential error cost methodology to appraise the performance of competition policy and to show how such a policy creates irresolvable tensions in fragile economies with weak institutions economies characterized by informal rules of business practice long standing symbiotic business state relationships and unpredictable state action They mount a powerful critique of the arguments of neo institutionalists who fail to recognize the vulnerable nature of emerging market economies and competition advocates who presume to stand ready and vigilant to enforce competition policy on state entities countries in contrast to developed countries Nigeria is taken as a proxy for resource dependent developing countries The book also determines whether competition law and policy could be used as a tool for addressing competition problems that may exist in resource dependent developing countries This book provides meaningful material for both undergraduate and graduate business school programs In addition it will be of great interest to lawyers historians economists sociologists and policy makers in both government and business who wish to understand competition issues in a clear and rigorous way in developing economies

Daniel Sokol, Thomas K. Cheng, Ioannis Lianos, 2013-09-11 The vast majority of the countries in the world are developing countries there are only thirty four OECD Organisation for Economic Co operation and Development countries and yet there is a serious dearth of attention to developing countries in the international and comparative law scholarship which has been preoccupied with the United States and the European Union Competition Law and Development investigates whether or not the competition law and policy transplanted from Europe and the United States can be successfully implemented in the developing world or whether the developing world experience suggests a need for a different analytical framework The political and economic environment of developing countries often differs significantly from that of developed countries in ways that may have serious implications for competition law enforcement The need to devote greater attention to developing countries is also justified by the changing global economic reality in which developing countries especially China India and Brazil have emerged as economic powerhouses Together with Russia the so called BRIC countries have accounted for thirty percent of global economic growth since the term was coined in 2001 In this sense developing countries deserve more attention not because of any justifiable differences from developed countries in competition law enforcement either in theoretical or practical terms but because of their sheer economic heft This book the second in the Global Competition Law and Economics series provides a number of viewpoints of what competition law and policy mean both in theory and practice in a development context

Does EU Merger Control Discriminate Against Small Market Companies? Mika Oinonen, 2010-01-01 Although the question posed by the title of this book has generated considerable debate the essential issue remains open and largely blurred While some believe that there is no so called small market problem others discern discrimination against small market companies i.e. companies with a strong position in their home markets but a modest position in the European and global markets and a consequent need for changes in competition law The author of this enormously helpful work here sets the stage for meaningful discussion by analysing the EC Merger Regulation's objectives, economic foundations and application practice to present a reasoned view of the issues that can be considered relevant for such a discussion. Considering their effect on the small market problem, the author scrutinizes such factors as the following: the Commission's methodology for delineating relevant markets in merger assessments; unnecessary prohibition caused by overestimation of the market power of small market mergers; erroneous approval of cases that should actually be prohibited; impact of the so-called Harvard and Chicago schools of competition theory and their key policy implications; process-related alternative views of competition and new synthesizing approaches; relevant criteria for a proper analysis of market power; concentration measures and market shares; barriers to entry; price and profitability analyses; and product definition v geographic definition of markets. In a final chapter, the author presents some tentative conclusions, normative in nature, concerning the problem and the relevant issues relating to it. As the first in-depth analysis of the issues that are actually involved with its particular diagnosis of the assessment of market power in considering the relevant issues for the problem, this study brings into salience the terms of the debate on the problem and thus takes a giant step forward towards defining what needs to be done. Competition lawyers, policymakers and academics in Europe and elsewhere will find the discussion of great value.
