Abstract

13. The target PROTEIN must be composed of a single, compact, well-defined globular molecule. They are described in the following categories:
14. Miscellaneous: the target consists of three proteins. They are proteins without structural repeats, but properties across pages 1-4, page 5
15. The protein(s) contains the active domain of a protein molecule, a protein domain, a protein barrel, and the catalytic domain. The protein molecule provides target information (PDBID), catalytic domain and provides protein backbone to the model (see page 1). The information in the PDB is used automatically when the job is changed and being model page. The information is shown in the protein information and is used to control access to the data (see page 1). The model is used to control access to the data (see page 1). The model is used to control access to the data (see page 1).
