Ben-Akiva, Hilde Meersman, Eddy Van de Voorde, 2008-10-01 Discusses Professor Marvin L Manheim s contributions to transportation This book presents his vision for the role of ICTs in transport It covers topics including predictions of production to consumption freight flows through the use of multi regional input output models and choice analysis using freight market research surveys Forecasting Travel in Urban America Konstantinos Chatzis, 2023-07-11 A history of urban travel demand modeling UTDM and its enormous influence on American life from the 1920s to the present For better and worse the automobile has been an integral part of the American way of life for decades Its ascendance would have been far less spectacular however had engineers and planners not devised urban travel demand modeling UTDM This book tells the story of this irreplaceable engineering tool that has helped cities accommodate continuous rise in traffic from the 1950s on Beginning with UTDM s origins as a method to help plan new infrastructure Konstantinos Chatzis follows its trajectory through new generations of models that helped make optimal use of existing capacity and examines related policy instruments including the recent use of intelligent transportation systems Chatzis investigates these models as evolving entities involving humans and nonhumans that were shaped through a specific production process In surveying the various generations of UTDM he delves into various means of production from tabulating machines to software packages and travel survey methods from personal interviews to GPS tracking devices and smartphones used to obtain critical information He also looks at the individuals who have collectively built a distinct UTDM social world by displaying specialized knowledge developing specific skills and performing various tasks and functions and by communicating interacting and even competing with one another Original and refreshingly accessible Forecasting Travel in Urban America offers the first detailed history behind the thinkers and processes that impact the lives of millions of city dwellers every day Qualitative Choice Analysis Kenneth Train, 1986 This book addresses two significant research areas in an interdependent fashion It is first of all a comprehensive but concise text that covers the recently developed and widely applicable methods of qualitative choice analysis illustrating the general theory through simulation models of automobile demand and use It is also a detailed study of automobile demand and use presenting forecasts based on these powerful new techniques The book develops the general principles that underlie qualitative choice models that are now being applied in numerous fields in addition to transportation such as housing labor energy communications and criminology The general form derivation and estimation of qualitative choice models are explained and the major models logit probit and GEV are discussed in detail And continuous discrete models are introduced In these qualitative choice methods and standard regression techniques are combined to analyze situations that neither alone can accurately forecast Summarizing previous research on auto demand the book shows how qualitative choice methods can be used by applying them to specific auto related decisions as the aggregate of individuals choices The simulation model that is constructed is a significant improvement over older models and should prove more useful to agencies and organizations requiring accurate forecasting of auto demand and use for planning and policy development The book concludes with an actual case study based on a model designed for the investigations of the California Energy Commission Kenneth Train is Visiting Associate Professor in Economics at the University of California Berkeley and Director of Economic Research at Cambridge Systematics Inc also in Berkeley Qualitative Choice Analysis is included in The MIT Press Transportation Studies Series edited by Marvin L Manheim Port Economics Jan Owen Jansson, Dan Shneerson, 1982 This study applies modern economic principles to the operations of modern port facilities ranging from new ports in the planning stages for developing nations to established American and European ports retrofitted to handle container cargos and larger vessels It investigates all the links in the chain of port services the transfer of goods between land and sea transportation and offers recommendations for strengthening the weaker links Port Economics covers the historical development of port organization and technology production measures short and long term cost functions pricing and investment The capital input by the port authorities and the labor input by the cargo handling companies are discussed and the authors consider the utility of merging port and stevedoring charges Queuing processes are adjusted to fit the special circumstances of port traffic allowing for the measurement of such variables as throughput and congestion costs The theory developed for individual ports is extended to national port systems over time Throughout the book elements of the theory are tested empirically against data from ports in the United States Europe the Middle East and Africa The final chapter is a large scale case study of the Nigerian port system which serves to test the whole of the authors economic theory including such concepts developed in the later chapters as dynamic port system investment and optimal port charges Jan Owen Jansson is Chief Economist of the Swedish National Road and Traffic Research Institute Dan Shneerson is Senior Lecturer in Economics at the University of Haifa Their book is the eighth in MIT Press Transportation Studies Series edited by Marvin L Manheim Strategy as Process Marvin L. Manheim, 1989 Transportation Models and Analysis Planning and Transport Research and Computation (International) Co. Meeting, 1980 Transportation Planning Practice Planning and Transport Research and Computation (International) Co. Meeting, 1982 Transport Policy, Management & Technology Towards 2001: The changing transport industry and technological innovation in transport, 1989

Proceedings ,1977 The Rand Paper Series , Service Levels of Urban Public Transport ,1980 The Generation and Screening of Alternatives in Policy Analysis Warren E. Walker,Rand Corporation,1987 Once a policy problem is deemed worthy of analysis a policy study proceeds by generating various alternative courses of action that might solve or alleviate the problem Large policy studies generally involve too many alternatives to examine each in detail so they often include a step in which those that are clearly unattractive are screened out This paper discusses how the alternatives to be evaluated in a policy study get identified and designed It also describes an efficient structure for the screening of alternatives
The paper was prepared as a chapter in a book entitled Handbook of Systems Analysis Craft Issues and Procedural Choices
