Hydrocarbons

Question 9.23:

Out of benzene, m-dinitrobenzene and toluene which will undergo nitration most easily and why?

Answer 9.23

The ease of nitration depends on the presence of electron density on the compound to form nitrates. Nitration reactions are examples of electrophilic substitution reactions where an electron-rich species is attacked by a nitronium ion (NO_2^+).

Now, CH_3 - group is electron donating and NO_2 - is electron withdrawing. Therefore, toluene will have the maximum electron density among the three compounds followed by benzene.

On the other hand, m-Dinitrobenzene will have the least electron density. Hence, it will undergo nitration with difficulty. Hence, the increasing order of nitration is as follows:

Question 9.24:

Suggest the name of a Lewis acid other than anhydrous aluminium chloride which can be used during ethylation of benzene.

Answer 9.24

The ethylation reaction of benzene involves the addition of an ethyl group on the benzene ring. Such a reaction is called a Friedel-Craft alkylation reaction. This reaction takes place in the presence of a Lewis acid.

Any Lewis acid like anhydrous FeCl_3 , SnCl_4 , BF_3 , etc. can be used during the ethylation of benzene.

Question 9.25:

Why is Wurtz reaction not preferred for the preparation of alkanes containing odd number of carbon atoms? Illustrate your answer by taking one example.

Answer 9.25

Wurtz reaction is limited for the synthesis of symmetrical alkanes (alkanes with an even number of carbon atoms) In the reaction, two similar alkyl halides are taken as reactants and an alkane, containing double the number of carbon atoms, are formed.
