Chapter 2: The Chemical Context of Life

1 What is generally true about essential elements and living organisms?

 Concept 2.1

SHOW HINT

Although all forms of life require iron, other elements are required only by certain species.

All organisms require 25 of the 92 naturally occurring elements to survive.

The elements carbon, hydrogen, nitrogen, and oxygen make up 20–25% of living mass.

Given their low concentrations in nature, the toxicity of some elements is generally not a factor in the evolution of biological communities.

Correct. Humans and other vertebrates require small amounts of iodine in their diets to maintain thyroid function. This is a requirement not observed among invertebrates.

2 If you were told that concentrations of trace elements above what is required by organisms generally have no effect on those organisms, what would you say?

 Concept 2.1

SHOW HINT

False. Increasing the concentration of trace elements above what is required generally has a beneficial effect on organisms.

Student Study Guide for Campbell's Biology Second Edition Martha R. Taylor,1990 New Technologies for Toxicity Testing Michael Balls,Robert D. Combes,Nirmala Bhogal,2012-03-22 The central theme running through this volume on New Technologies for Toxicity Testing is the development and application of advanced techniques for cell and tissue culture as well as new markers and endpoints of toxicity as alternatives to the traditional paradigm of relying on data from laboratory animal tests to undertake labelling and risk assessment Of course many of the techniques and methods described in this volume are in the early stages of development and much work will be needed to ensure their further improvement optimisation and validation However we are confident that this will be achieved and that just as with the in vitro assays that were validated and granted regulatory acceptance over the last decade these and many other new advanced methods will likewise become part of the toxicologist s improved toolbox for coping with increasingly stringent and numerous regulatory requirements and test chemicals while placing less reliance on traditional testing paradigms California State Journal of Medicine ,1919 Quantitative Ecology and Marine Biology Gerald J.
