Scienza Delle Finanze Rosen Gayer:

Justice as Equality and Neutrality Alberto De Luigi, 2015-03-26 The ideal of liberal neutrality and the ideal of equality are often seen as a trade off If the State has to be neutral between the interests of the rich and the poor it is supposed to not intervene redistributing resources between them Neutrality is thus associated to the ideal of a laissez faire free market system while equality is generally seen as an ideal requiring State policies aiming at equal opportunity In this book neutrality and equality are presented as compatible and complementary ideals rather than antagonist First it is shown that the moral justification of neutrality ultimately relies on a particular ideal of equality called equal respect Second there are principles of justice and State policies aimed at improving equality of opportunity that can be neutrally justifiable It is also provided a neutral justification of Rawls difference principle showing even how libertarian thinkers may agree on it Positioning
