Teaching English Learners Lynne T. Díaz-Rico,2004 Written in Lynne Diaz Rico s passionate style the second edition of Strategies for Teaching English Learners continues to be a one stop introduction to teaching English to speakers of other languages It includes an introduction to the fascinating challenges of teaching English learners and offers a comprehensive overview of learning theories and teaching strategies BOOK JACKET A Global Education Approach to Language Teaching Naoko Sugano McHale,1994 How important is motivation in second language learning? I. Magel,2017-06-15 Seminar paper from the year 2012 in the subject Didactics for the subject English Pedagogy Literature Studies grade 2 0 Saarland University language English abstract Motivation in second language learning is an increasingly important area in applied linguistics The current state of research is characterized by many different approaches which have developed over time Today there are still divided views about motivation The social psychological approach dominated until the early 1990s Criticized later supplemented and eventually replaced by pedagogical and psychological concepts In order to understand the importance of motivation in second language learning it is important to look at different types of motivation after clarifying the definition of the term motivation used in the text below This paper has been divided into three parts First I will give a definition of the term motivation Then I will focus on different kinds of motivation especially the distinctions between motivation regarding learning in general by Deci and Ryan and motivation especially in language learning by Gardner Finally the practical part deals with motivation in second language classroom in Saarland Thus the main question addressed in this paper is How important is motivation in second language learning

How to Motivate English Language Learner Middle School Students to Learn Math AnhTho Le,2011 The purpose of this project is to learn how to motivate English language learners ELL middle school students to learn math This research intends to measure the best teaching method and determine the best motivational technique to help ELL students improve their learning These questions must be raised and researched because ELL students often do not receive support from home The parents of ELL students either have their own English language limitations or lack knowledge of the subject At school teachers overlook ELL students because they are quiet and do not seek help due to limitations of their English Over a six week period two teachers and two bilingual assistants were interviewed and two classrooms one middle school and one high school learning a middle school math curriculum were observed This paper presents data from these interviews and observations and analyzes collections of MAP score data from two classrooms of 30 students in the Washington School District This research found that of the many effective strategies for teaching ELL students such as reviewing prior knowledge before introducing a new lesson modeling the process of learning through thinking aloud engaging in group work and cooperative learning one of the most important strategies is the explore method it takes extra time but students benefit more from this method Teachers must assess students ability to work independently the consistency of any struggles to complete their homework and chapter test scores All of these assessments can indicate the need for arranging an early intervention Self motivation is the key to success In order to achieve success in learning an ELL student must desire to be successful Target homework is meaningful and causes less stress to ELL students
