Questions&Answers

Q-1

A 45 year old woman has itchy, dry eyes. There is mild pain in the morning but worsens during the day. She says her eyes feel gritty especially in an air conditioning room. A Schirmer's test was performed and results show 7 mm of moisture on the filter paper. What is the SINGLE most appropriate management?

(A normal Schirmer's test is considered to have more than 10 mm of moisture on the filter paper)

- A. Cyclopentolate
- B. Steroids drops
- C. Hypromellose drops
- D. Topical ciclosporin
- E. Scleral lenses

ANSWER:

Hypromellose drops

EXPLANATION:

Keratoconjunctivitis sicca is the diagnosis here which is described as decreased lacrimal secretion characterised by conjunctival hyperaemia and itchiness. It occurs commonly as part of Sjogren's syndrome. Keratoconjunctivitis sicca is confirmed by Schirmer's test and the treatment always includes the use of artificial tears. Schirmer's test determines whether the eye produces enough tears to keep it moist. It is considered negative or normal when there is more than 10 mm of moisture on the filter paper in 5 minutes.

There are various tear substitutes that can be used to treat dry eyes. They can be in the form of drops, gels, and ointments.

Examples of drops include:

- Hypromellose
- Sodium chloride
- Sodium hyaluronate

Note that topical ciclosporin is also useful for dry eyes but it should not be used as first line. Scleral lenses can also be used as they create a tear-filled reservoir which prevents the feeling of dry eyes but again should not be used as first line. Scleral lenses are expensive.
