Nicholls,1989 Young children and even infants work hard at mastering various skills and show spontaneous pleasure at their own accomplishment John Nicholls explores the conditions that cause students to lose their unselfconscious involvement in a game or task and become concerned with how they are stacking up against others Charting the development of children s concepts of luck effort and ability he argues that with age they are increasingly prone to take superiority over others as the definition of success An emphasis on interpersonal competition which permeates Western society exacerbates this egotistical tendency and results in diminished accomplishment and alienation from school To overcome these problems Nicholls argues we must become as little children for whom absorption in exploration and accomplishment come naturally even when those around them are more competent This ideal is unlikely to be promoted through technical approaches to education or by the current emphasis on the role of education in economic development Instead Nicholls calls for a progressive approach to education Difficult though it is to implement this approach is most likely to increase equality of motivation for intellectual development substantial accomplishment satisfaction in work and more productive relations with others These are important ideas for anyone interested in achievement motivation for those professionally involved in education and for nonspecialists interested in or worried about how we educate our children
