Almost Shades Of Grey:

Falling in Love Grant Allen, 2020-12-01 Falling in Love 1889 is a brilliant collection of essays by innovative Canadian writer Grant Allen. His wide ranging interests and unique personal tone present science in a style that not only makes difficult concepts digestible to the average reader but also presages the popularity of New Journalism in the latter half of the twentieth century. In the title essay Allen moves from analysis of the evolutionary implications of love to a blistering critique of the institution of marriage. Central to this piece is a rejection of matchmaking according to religion, race and rank which Allen makes with the hope that marriage for love will last for ever. Allen was a writer unafraid of ruffling feathers, a tireless individual who delighted in dissecting and ejecting convention. In British and Foreign Allen looks at the non-indigenous nature of so much of Britain's environment to argue that in the end there is nothing really and truly British. Allen was also perhaps more than anything else a deeply curious man, a person for whom no topic was unworthy of questioning. In Honey Dew as though under a microscope he examines the remarkable coexistence between ants and aphids to not only highlight the intricate webs that make up the natural world but to expose humanity's outsized and often helpless role in the life of the planet. Other essays in Falling in Love find Allen espousing on the nonexistence of thunderbolts, composing a treatise on the sociopolitical history of the banana and saying what he would have said on an archaeological expedition had he been asked. For Allen humor is never too far from insight and insight is always within reach. Falling in Love is both a pleasure to read and intoxicating, a work for readers intrigued by science or looking for a fresh voice to cut through the world's confusion. Grant Allen was not just a novelist and essayist but a writer's writer whose words read as clearly as though they were written yesterday. With a beautifully designed cover and professionally typeset manuscript, this new edition of Grant Allen's Falling in Love is an understated classic of literary nonfiction reimagined for modern readers.

The Macrolepidoptera of the World: Noctuid heterocera Adalbert Seitz, 1913 Moths of the Limberlost Gene Stratton-Porter, 1912 It is about this very bit of Indiana that Mrs Porter has written her book Moths of the Limberlost and it is the most unusual and interesting nature book ever imagined. It is a story of the Moths of the Limberlost which every reader of

A Girl of the Limberlost will remember Mrs Porter pictures and describes the moth hunted by Elnora and in these chapters there is one of the landscapes over which she hunted much of the swamp and the very bridge under which she was working to cut loose a cocoon when Philip came up the stream fishing There is also the log cabin in which Elnora lived The text is just scientific enough to give the name and description of each moth cocoon and caterpillar the remainder is a fascinating record of personal experiences in finding or raising the specimens The Carter Times Carter White Lead Company,1925
