outlines how transfer and mobility can be improved in the future. It takes the airport as the focal point of true multi-modal passenger terminals and presents the development of these buildings as representing a new experience in travel. The book shows that the success of the experience of transferring from one mode of transport to another depends on the many factors including congestion in an already overloaded system and the way that designers and managers have addressed contingency planning. International examples are drawn from areas where mobility is most concentrated and the demands on design are at their highest. The book also addresses important issues of rebuilding and redevelopment where once separate modes of transport are being linked to each other and where short-term inconveniences rectify past wrongs in the long term. It is a compendium of architectural and engineering achievement.

The book starts by describing the aviation system, then focuses on the supply side and the demand side of the system and in a final part focuses on steering and controlling the system of aviation from a managerial, economic and regulatory perspective. Examples and case studies of airports, airlines and the production industry in each chapter support the application-oriented approach. The summary and review questions help the reader to understand the focus and main messages of each chapter. Students and researchers in business administration with a focus on aviation as well as professionals in the industry looking to refresh or broaden their knowledge in the field will benefit from this book.
