2. CURRENT STATUS

2.1 UK and Wales

The long-eared owl is a nocturnal hunter and feeds mainly on small mammals and occasionally on small birds. It hunts over coniferous and, sometimes, deciduous woodlands and their margins.

There is a population increase in the winter months as migrant birds from the colder regions of Europe arrive in Britain. It is often seen in communal winter roosts in low scrub trees and young conifers. It breeds mainly in old woodland cavity nests, in both coniferous and deciduous woodlands. Breeding populations of the long-eared owl are contracting and declining, with numbers estimated at 2,000 – 2,500.

2.1 Caerphilly County Borough

In the Gwent/Glamorgan area the main nesting habitat is thicket/early mature stage conifers and the hunting habitats are coedcae/ffridd, rhos pasture, upland heath and re-stock areas. There is one recent record of the long eared owl in Caerphilly county borough around Cwmcarn, and a historical record from Wern Ddu. The species is thought to be under-recorded because of its nocturnal habit and is easily overlooked. More survey work is required.

2.2 Links with Habitats

- Deciduous Woodlands
- Species-rich Grasslands (rhos pasture)
