Macroeconomics, agriculture, and food security
Díaz-Bonilla, Eugenio, 2015-10-27 Why write a book on macroeconomic policies and their links to agriculture and food security in developing countries The food price spikes of the years just prior to 2010 and the economic political and social dislocations they generated refocused the attention of policymakers and development practitioners on the agricultural sector and food security concerns But even without those traumatic events the importance of agriculture for developing countries and for an adequate functioning of the world economy cannot be denied First although declining over time primary agriculture still represents important percentages of developing countries overall domestic production exports and employment If agroindustrial transportation commercial and other related activities are also counted then the economic and social importance of agriculture based sectors increases significantly Furthermore large numbers of the world's poor still live in rural areas and work in agriculture Through the links via production trade employment and prices agricultural production is also crucial for national food security Second it has been shown that agriculture in developing countries has important growth and employment multipliers for the rest of the economy and agriculture seems to have larger positive effects in reducing poverty than growth in other sectors Third agriculture is not only important for individual developing countries but it has global significance considering the large presence of developing countries in world agricultural production and the increasing participation in international trade of those products these three points will be covered in greater detail in Chapter 1
