

Teaching Statements for Tenure and Promotion Cases: Suggestions for Faculty, Chairs, and Directors

The LSA Executive Committee looks closely at the teaching record of each candidate for tenure and/or promotion. Members examine and comment upon the individual E&E evaluations, the E&E comparisons made by the department, the syllabi, and the TRP or JTP report. Executive Committee members often use the candidate's teaching statement to frame their discussion of the teaching aspect of a tenure and promotion case, so the statement serves an important function and requires care and attention. The guidelines below are broad, not definitive. They are meant to help departmental chairs and program directors in the mentoring discussions that take place prior to the preparation of the promotion materials.

College guidelines set a maximum of five pages for the teaching statement. Most teaching statements are in the range of four to five pages. In general, the Executive Committee has found that statements of one or two pages are simply not of sufficient length. The statement needs to feature more than simply a prose recounting of a list of courses taught. A typically good statement would include most of the following elements:

- A statement of teaching philosophy.
- A statement outlining strategic goals.
- A statement discussing classroom techniques and tactics, paying attention to both undergraduate and graduate teaching.
- A discussion of graduate and undergraduate mentoring, research lab supervision, UROP/SROP and REU students, and completed Ph.D. students
- A serious engagement with the trajectory of the E&E evaluations, and honest self-reflection on classes that have produced lower scores. Faculty should avoid the formulaic and the facile.
- A statement discussing the candidate's contributions to the curriculum, in relation to both the department or program and the College itself.
- A sense of future ideas or plans for course development, curricular contribution, or pedagogical experimentation or innovation.
