Egypt takes an innovative and integrated approach to the use of scientific techniques and methodologies within the study of ancient Egypt Accessibly demonstrating how to integrate scientific methodologies into Egyptology broadly and in Egyptian archaeology in particular this volume will help to maximise the amount of information that can be obtained within a study of ancient Egypt be it in the field museum or laboratory Using a range of case studies which exemplify best practice within Egyptian archaeological science Science in the Study of Ancient Egypt presents both the scientific methods of analysis available and their potential applications to Egyptologists Although Egyptology has mainly shown a marked lack of engagement with recent archaeological science the authors illustrate the inclusive but varied nature of the scientific archaeology which is now being undertaken demonstrating how new analytical techniques can develop greater understanding of Egyptian data

The Oxford Handbook of the Archaeology of Diet Julia Lee-Thorp,M. Anne Katzenberg,2024-06-24 Humans are unique among animals for the wide diversity of foods and food preparation techniques that are intertwined with regional cultural distinctions around the world The Oxford Handbook of the Archaeology of Diet explores evidence for human diet from our earliest ancestors through the dispersal of our species across the globe As populations expanded people encountered new plants and animals and learned how to exploit them for food and other resources Today globalization aside the results manifest in a wide array of traditional cuisines based on locally available indigenous and domesticated plants and animals How did this complexity emerge When did early hominins actively incorporate animal foods into their diets and later exploit marine and freshwater resources What were the effects of reliance on domesticated grains such as maize and rice on past populations and the health of individuals How did a domesticated plant like maize move from its place of origin to the northernmost regions where it can be grown Importantly how do we discover this information and what can be deduced about human health biology and cultural practices in the past and present Such questions are explored in thirty three chapters written by leading researchers in the study of human dietary adaptations The approaches encompass everything from information gleaned from comparisons with our nearest primate relatives tools used in procuring and preparing foods skeletal remains chemical or genetic indicators of diet and genetic variation and modern or historical ethnographic observations Examples are drawn from across the globe and information on the research methods used is embedded within each chapter The Handbook provides a comprehensive reference work for advanced undergraduate and graduate students and for professionals seeking authoritative essays on specific topics about diet in the human past Advances in Fig Research and Sustainable Production Moshe A. Flaishman, Uygun Aksoy, 2022-05-25 The common fig Ficus carica L is one of the oldest fruits domesticated by humans and is native to southwest Asia and the Mediterranean. Figs have been associated with health and prosperity since ancient times. They are rich in fibre, potassium, calcium and iron, as well as being an important source of vitamins, amino acids and antioxidants. In recent years, increased consumption has caused fig production to shift to new countries such as Mexico, Brazil, India and China. However, fig is a challenging fruit crop to grow. It is susceptible to insect pests and diseases, as well as injuries from abiotic stress during fruit development and ripening. As a delicate fruit, it also requires complicated postharvest procedures and climate change presents additional challenges. This volume serves as a comprehensive reference for current and future practices of fig production, consumption, research and innovation, and is essential for academic researchers and those involved in research and development in the fig industry.

Plant Foods of Greece Soultana Maria Valamoti, 2023-06-13 Greek archaeologist Soultana Maria Valamoti takes readers on a culinary journey in her synthesis of plant foods and culinary practices of Neolithic and Bronze Age Greece. Plant foods were the main ingredients of daily meals in prehistoric Greece and most likely of special dishes prepared for feasts and rituals. For more than thirty years, Valamoti has been analyzing a large body of archaeobotanic data that spans 7 000 years from the Neolithic to Bronze Age and that was retrieved from nearly one hundred sites in mainland Greece and the Greek islands. This book also reflects experimentation and research of ancient written sources. Her approach allows an exploration of culinary variability through time. The thousands of charred seeds identified from occupation debris correspond to minuscule time capsules. She is able to document changes from the cooking of the first farmers to the sophisticated cuisines of the elites who inhabited palaces in the first cities of Europe in the south of Greece during the Late Bronze Age. Along the way, she explains the complex processes for the addition of new ingredients such as millet and olives, condiments, sweet tastes and complex recipes. Ancient Grains also explores regional variability and diversity. Rich chapters are devoted to overviewing plantstuffs in their spatial and temporal distribution, with ritual and symbolic significance noted, and also to broader themes and practices. The main chapters are on bread, cereals, pulses, oils, fruit and nuts, fermented brews, healing foods, cooking and identity. Valamoti also offers insight into engaging in public archaeology and provides recipes that incorporate ancient plant ingredients and connect prehistory to the present in a critical way. Finally, a thorough bibliography also includes archaeobotanical publications in Greek. Copious color and black and white photos enhance the text. Archaeology in Africa. Potentials and perspectives on laboratory & fieldwork research Savino di Lernia, Marina Gallinaro, 2019-09-24 Africa encompasses a multitude of environments and biomes that require specific scientific strategies, from desktop studies to field research to laboratory analysis, to tackle research questions that may range from the emergence of early humans to the ethnoarchaeological investigation. In several areas, turmoil, social instability and security constraints hamper or limit field activities and long term funded programs The kidnapping of German colleagues and the tragic death of two local collaborators in Nigeria urge to rethink our agenda and challenge our view of current research practice This 1st Workshop on Archaeology in Africa organized by Sapienza University of Rome convened several researches from Italy or Italy based researchers The aim was to present and discuss theoretical methodological and financial problems for Africanist researchers today In a global perspective the synergy between research groups is crucial The need to intensify the national and international cooperation is also an essential step This book collects a selection of the different perspectives presented to the workshop mostly focussing from North Africa and East Africa

The origin of agriculture is one of the defining events of human history Some 10 000 years ago bands of hunter gatherers started to abandon their high mobility lifestyles in favour of growing crops and the creation of settled sedentary communities This settlement in favour of the agricultural lifestyle triggered the evolution of complex political and economic structures and technological developments and ultimately underpinned the rise of all the great civilisations of recent human history Domestication of plants in the Old World reviews the origin and spread of cultivation in south west Asia Europe and north east Africa from the very earliest beginnings This new edition incorporates the most recent findings from molecular biology about the genetic relations between domesticated plants and their wild ancestors it adds material on several new crop plants and it incorporates extensive new archaeological data about the spread of agriculture within the region The reference list has been completely updated as have the list of archaeological sites and the site maps From reviews of the second edition This book is indeed a mine of information An enormous and diverse body of important results is digested and presented economically in a form that should encourage other authors to mine it and apply the results to their own fields Nature This is an excellent book suitable for libraries reference shelves and anyone who teaches or writes about plant domestication Journal of Ethnobiology Only a few years after the publication in 1988 of Zohary and Hopf's textbook the volume was already out of print. One cannot be grateful enough to the authors that they seized the opportunity to update the book. An indispensable reference work, a wealth of information is presented in a systematic way. This already classic textbook has amply proven its value and hardly needs further recommendation. Helinium Journal of Grapevine Research, 2017

The New Encyclopaedia Britannica: Macropaedia (19 v.), 1983 The New Encyclopædia Britannica, 1981 The Transition from Foraging to Farming and the Origin of Agriculture in China Tracey Lie Dan Lu, 1999. This book explores the origins of agriculture in China. It includes archaeological data from the terminal Pleistocene to the early Holocene found in the Yellow and Yangzi River valleys, botanical data on wild millet and wild rice, data on palaeoclimates and palaeoenvironments, and comparative ethnographic data. Lithic evidence indicates cultural continuity through this period, and archaeological discoveries illustrate that wild cereal exploitation was practised prior to the emergence of agriculture. As the dry and cold palaeoclimate forced prehistoric people to search for new sources of food, intensive cereal exploitation might have resulted in a sedentary way of life. Increasing population size triggered attempts to increase the productivity of food. It is also argued that the invention of pottery was prompted by the need to boil cereal grains. As cereals became staple foods, demands for increased production triggered cereal cultivation and domestication.
