Dse Hi Family Community And The Hearing Impaired Child:

Family, Community And The Hearing Impaired Child Edited By: S. Narayanaswamy, 2006 , Catalog of Educational Captioned Films/videos for the Deaf , 1988 Resources in education , 1991 Listening to Learn Marguerite Kennedy Vasconcellos, 2016 There is a growing body of research that shows correlation between family engagement and enhanced student outcomes Federal legislation regulating special education notably IDEA 2004 and ESSA 2015 has placed an increasing emphasis on family engagement with each iteration Furthermore it is commonly understood that family engagement is crucial when a child has a hearing impairment Recognizing that connection this study intended to explore the practices that parents of children who are deaf or hearing impaired perceive as facilitative of and obstacles to family engagement in the special education experience The purpose of the study was to highlight these strategies in an effort to enhance their effectiveness among stakeholders in special education The conceptual framework was supported by research and included three streams 1 families of children who are deaf and hearing impaired 2 home school and community engagement and 3 facilitative practices and obstacles to engagement The sample population included parents of children who ranged in age from kindergarten to entering college and who participate in hearing support service as their primary special education assignment A phenomenological approach was taken in examining the shared life experiences of the participants An initial poll of families of children with hearing loss in a southeastern Pennsylvania regional service agency identified participants who described themselves as having high levels of family engagement A subset of the participants was invited to participate in one on one interviews and to respond to a writing prompt Interview responses provided thick rich descriptions of participants experiences which were recorded electronically and then transcribed and analyzed to identify themes The study revealed that parents value open two way communication with educational teams They seek information ongoing support for technology and sustained opportunities to connect with other parents to enhance their funds of knowledge Findings of this study represent a call to action to promote transformational leadership necessitating the investment of time resources and energy that focus on family engagement as the foundation of all educational endeavors

The Deaf Child in the Family and at School Patricia Elizab Spencer, Carol J. Erting, Marc Marschark, 1999-11-01 This book presents chapters by many eminent researchers and interventionists all of whom address the development of deaf and hard of hearing children in the context of family and school A variety of disciplines and perspectives are provided in order to capture the complexity of factors affecting development of these children in their diverse environments Consistent with current theory and educational practice the book focuses most strongly on the interaction of family and child strengths and needs and the role of educational and other interventionists in supporting family and child growth This work and the authors represented in it have been influenced by the seminal work of Kathryn P Meadow Orlans whose work continues to apply a multidisciplinary developmental approach to understanding the development of deaf children The book differs from other collections in the degree to which the chapters share ecological and developmental theoretical bases A synthesis of information is provided in section introductions and in an afterword provided by Dr Meadow Orlans The book reflects emerging research practice in the field by representing both qualitative and quantitative approaches In addition the book is notable for the contributions of deaf as well as hearing authors and for chapters in which research participants speak for themselves providing first person accounts of experiences and feelings of deaf children and their parents Some chapters in the book may surprise readers in that they present a more positive view of family and child functioning than has historically been the case in this field This is consistent with emerging data from deaf and hard of hearing children who have benefitted from early identification and intervention In addition it represents an emerging recognition of strengths shown by the children and by their deaf and hearing parents The book moves from consideration of child and family to a focus on the role and effects of school environments on development Issues of culture and expectations pervade the chapters in this section of the book which includes chapters addressing effects of school placement options positive effects of learning about deaf culture and history effects of changing educational practice in developing nations and the need for increased knowledge about ways to meet individual needs of the diverse group of deaf and hard of hearing students Thus the book gives the reader a coherent view of current knowledge and issues in research and intervention for deaf and hard of hearing children and their families Because the focus is on child and family instead of a specific discipline the book can serve as a helpful supplemental text for advanced undergraduate and graduate courses in a variety of disciplines including education psychology sociology and language studies with an emphasis on deaf and hard of hearing children

The Young Deaf Or Hard of Hearing Child Barbara Bodner-Johnson, Marilyn Sass-Lehrer, 2003 As deaf and hard of hearing children are identified at an increasingly early age professionals need to expand their knowledge about early intervention and education for these young children and their families This scholarly text from the experts provides a solid foundation of research key concepts and practical suggestions Essential reading for early childhood educators education professionals speech language pathologists and students this comprehensive resource fully prepares readers for successful partnerships with families and their deaf and hard of hearing children
