Teaching Motivation for Student Engagement Debra K. Meyer,Alyssa Emery,2021-03-01 Helping teachers understand and apply theory and research is one of the most challenging tasks of teacher preparation and professional development As they learn about motivation and engagement teachers need conceptually rich yet easy to use frameworks At the same time teachers must understand that student engagement is not separate from development instructional decision making classroom management student relationships and assessment This volume on teaching teachers about motivation addresses these challenges The authors share multiple approaches and frameworks to cut through the growing complexity and variety of motivational theories and tie theory and research to real world experiences that teachers are likely to encounter in their courses and classroom experiences. Additionally, each chapter is summarized with key take away practices. A shared perspective across all the chapters in this volume on teaching teachers about motivation is walking the talk. In every chapter, readers will be provided with rich examples of how research on and principles of classroom motivation can be reconceptualized through a variety of college teaching strategies. Teachers and future teachers learning about motivation need to experience explicit modeling practice and constructive feedback in their college courses and professional development in order to incorporate those into their own practice. In addition, a core assumption throughout this volume is the importance of understanding the situated nature of motivation and avoiding a one size fits all approach in the classroom. Teachers need to fully interrogate their instructional practices not only in terms of motivational principles but also for their cultural relevance, equity, and developmental appropriateness. Just like P-12 students, college students bring their histories as learners and beliefs about motivation to their formal study of motivation. That is why college instructors teaching motivation must begin by helping students evaluate their personal beliefs and experiences. Relatedly, college instructors need to know their students and model differentiating their interactions to support each of them. The authors in this volume have collectively decades of experience teaching at the college level and conducting research in motivation and provide readers with a variety of strategies to help teachers and future teachers explore how motivation is supported and undermined. In each chapter in this volume, readers will learn how college instructors can demonstrate what effective motivationally supportive classrooms look sound and feel like.

Motivation and Self-Regulated Learning Dale H. Schunk, Barry J. Zimmerman, 2012-08-06. This volume focuses on the role of motivational processes such as goals, attributions, self-efficacy, outcome expectations, self-concept, self-esteem, social comparisons, emotions, values, and self-evaluations in self-regulated learning. It provides theoretical and empirical evidence demonstrating the role of motivation in self-regulated learning and discusses detailed applications of the principles of motivation and self-regulation in educational contexts. Each chapter includes a description of the motivational variables, the theoretical rationale for their importance, research evidence to support their role in self-regulation, suggestions for ways to incorporate motivational variables into learning contexts to foster self-regulatory skill development and achievement outcomes.

The Influence of Teacher-Student Relationships and Feedback on Students' Engagement with Learning Roger Wood, 2018-06-11 This book presents a potential hierarchy between the three basic psychological needs central to Self Determination Theory SDT Findings from the author s research suggest that the motivation to exercise autonomy is an outcome that is cumulatively influenced by the perceived quality of the teacher student relationship and students perceived competence within specific learning contexts and with a specific teacher These findings are the basis for three hypotheses regarding students motivation to engage with learning activities The first is that perceived competence is informed by and reciprocally informs the quality of the teacher student relationship The second is that students perceived competence and the quality of the teacher student relationship have a combined impact upon students autonomous motivation The final posit is that a teacher can be autonomy supportive both prior to and during activities where students have opportunities to exercise their autonomy Such autonomy support includes the influence of teacher feedback upon students perceived competence and their subsequent motivation to autonomously engage with learning activities This research begins to unravel such motivational interplay through an SDT informed model which is used as the basis for discussing the specific influence of teacher feedback and autonomy support upon students engagement with learning activities in formal learning settings The findings and model are worthy of further testing and development as part of the wider agenda of student engagement wellbeing and positive psychology prevalent in educational research education psychology and the philosophy of social motivation
