

On Managing

Manager must demonstrate leadership, respect, trust and fairness. Doing these things right consistently will go a long way towards creating an engaged team.

2. TRUST AND RESPECT START WITH YOU

You must be strong and secure enough to give out trust and respect. Let your employees know that you trust them and respect them. It is a good idea to let them know that you trust them and respect them. It is a good idea to let them know that you trust them and respect them.

3. BUILD FROM THE BOTTOM UP

A bottom-up approach is different and unique. It is a bottom-up approach that enables them to find their identity within work and to become the best employee that they can be.

4. 'MASTERY', NOT COMPETITION

Encourage your employees to learn to love what they do by making their work and work environment a place where they can master their craft. Encourage them to learn to love what they do by making their work and work environment a place where they can master their craft.

Contains six selected articles on managing people from the Harvard Business Review. Includes advice on effective leadership, employee motivation, and how to ensure work teams function successfully. Leadership That Gets Results (Harvard Business Review Classics) Daniel Goleman, 2017-06-06. A leader's singular job is to get results. But even with all the leadership training programs and expert advice available, effective leadership still eludes many people and organizations. One reason, says Daniel Goleman, is that such experts offer advice based on inference, experience, and instinct, not on quantitative data. Now drawing on research of more than 3,000 executives, Goleman explores which precise leadership behaviors yield positive results. He outlines six distinct leadership styles, each one springing from different components of emotional intelligence. Each style has a distinct effect on the working atmosphere of a company, division, or team and in turn on its financial performance. Coercive leaders demand immediate compliance. Authoritative leaders mobilize people toward a vision. Affiliative leaders create emotional bonds and harmony. Democratic leaders build consensus through participation. Pacesetter leaders expect excellence and self-direction. And coaching leaders develop people for the future. The research indicates that leaders who get the best results don't rely on just one leadership style; they use most of the styles in any given week. Goleman details the types of business situations each style is best suited for and he explains how leaders who lack one or more of these styles can expand their repertoires. He maintains that with practice leaders can switch among leadership styles to produce powerful results thus turning the art of leadership into a science The Harvard Business Review Classics series offers you the opportunity to make seminal Harvard Business Review articles a part of your permanent management library Each highly readable volume contains a groundbreaking idea that continues to shape best practices and inspire countless managers around the world and will have a direct impact on you today and for years to come
