

DICTATION

13th November 2019

During the last few decades, large numbers of Americans have led physically inactive lives. People go out to their cars in the morning, sit or stand in one place most of the day, drive home and settle into easy chairs to watch others play football on television. In so doing, they get little vigorous exercise. The problem is that the health benefits of exercise are not as obvious as the risks of cigarette smoking. Today, however, more and more people are jogging, cycling or engaging in other forms of exercise. The phenomenon is a good example of how general social values and expectations can affect behavior. There were hardly any joggers thirty years ago, but there are millions today.
