energy

Organisms obtain energy in a process called (1) cellular respiration. This process harvests electrons from carbon compounds, such as (2) glucose, and uses that energy to make (3) ATP. ATP is used to provide (4) energy for cells to do work. In (5) Glycolysis, glucose is broken down into pyruvate. Glycolysis is a(n) (6) anaerobic process because it does not require oxygen. Glycolysis takes place in the (7) cytoplasm. Two molecules of ATP and two molecules of (8) NADH are formed for every glucose molecule that is broken down. (9) aerobic respiration takes place in the (10) mitochondria. It is aerobic because the process requires (11) oxygen.

Cultural Travels of Energy Peter Hjertholm,2023-05-12 This book offers a cultural history of the travels of energy in the English language from its origins in Aristotle s ontology where it referred to the activity of being through its English usage as a way to speak about the inherent nature of things to its adoption as a name for the mechanics of motion capacity for work A distinguished literature deals with energy as matter of science history But this literature fails to adequately answer a historical question about the rise of the science of energy How did the commonplace word energy end up becoming a concept in science This account differs in important ways from the history of the word in the Oxford English Dictionary Discovering the origins and early travels of energy is essential for understanding how the word was borrowed into physics and therefore a cultural history of energy is a necessary companion to the science history of the term It is important that modern scholars in a variety of fields be aware that energy did not always have a scientific content The absence of that awareness can lead to have led to anachronistic interpretations of energy in historical sources from before the 1860s A History of the Cultural Travels of Energy will be useful for those interested in the history of science and technology cultural history and linguistics
