

10 Leadership Techniques for Building High-Performing Teams

by Phil Harkins

Well-integrated, high-performing teams—those that “click”—never lose sight of their goals and are largely self-sustaining. In fact, they seem to take on a life of their own. And it all comes down to leadership.

In every case that has been studied at the Europe-based Centre for Organizational Research, teams that “click” always have a leader who creates the environment and establishes the operating principles and values that are conducive to high performance. The evidence for this is clearly seen in organizations where a manager who creates high performance moves to another part of the organization, or a different organization, and within 18 months they once again establish a high-performing team.

We believe these leaders operate in an organized, systematic way to build successful teams, and that the formula not only involves what leaders should say and do, but also what they should not say and do. It also involves working backwards—leaders should envisage the future before dealing with the present.

The four most significant behaviors consistently demonstrated by high-impact leaders are

- defining clear goals or a vision of the future in accordance with overall organizational aims (the “big picture”)
- creating blueprints for action to achieve those goals
- using language to build trust, encourage forward thinking and create energy within the team (“powerful conversations”)
- getting the right people involved (“passionate champions”)
