

International Air Transport Association (IATA)

By Dylan McGuire

The International Air Transport Association (IATA) is recognized as a successful PMI Registered Education Provider (R.E.P.). In partnership with more than 450 global training organizations, IATA's industry professional development programs in the aviation, cargo, and travel and tourism sectors are delivered to over 92,000 industry specialists and students every year.

IATA started its first industry training initiative back in the early 1970s. It founded the IATA Training and Development Institute (ITDI) in 2004 to develop the project management skills of air transport industry professionals worldwide. Its programs provide aviation professionals and their organizations tools to keep pace with the complex challenges of their industry. It currently offers unique courses and diploma programs that integrate IATA's global air transport expertise with the good practices and principles of the PMBOK® Guide.

IATA first recognized the value of project management in the early 2000s when it created a Project Management Office (PMO). By implementing the use of project management organization wide, the PMO enabled IATA to achieve its strategic objectives of enhancing the passenger experience; minimizing the impact of air transport on the environment; helping airlines to operate economically; and continuously improving safety standards.

"In the case of project management, we realized that our industry is replete with a vast array of projects—from airlines trying to acquire a new aircraft to airports building new terminals, for example—with everyone using different methods," says Ismail AlBaidhani, Head of Global Partnerships and Learning Innovation at ITDI.

Mr. AlBaidhani said that the ITDI program was created in order to help those in the industry help themselves.

ABOUT IATA

An international trade body created over 60 years ago, IATA today represents some 240 airlines whose combined flights comprise 84 percent of global air traffic. Its mission is to represent, lead and serve the airline industry.

IATA has developed international standards for passenger and cargo airlines in 150 countries worldwide. One of its key industry priorities is to develop initiatives for airline members that simplify processes and increase passenger convenience, while reducing costs and improving efficiency.

It has long been a major proponent of project management.

One such project was the global introduction of electronic ticketing. Due to IATA's efforts, paper tickets are practically gone from the industry, making ticketing faster, more efficient and more secure.

History of Air Cargo and Airmail from the 18th Century Camille Allaz, 2005-03

It was first published in French by the Institut du Transport Aerien in 1998 and received very favourable reviews. Through the publication of the English language edition this remarkable work is now accessible to many more readers around the world. In addition the author has expanded the book with new sections and he has extensively updated it to bring the story of air cargo into the twenty first century concluding with a look into the future. The author Camille Allaz served as Senior Vice President Cargo at Air France for 10 years which gave him an insider's close up view of his subject a privilege not enjoyed by many historians. There is no aspect of mail or cargo transport by air that has not been thoroughly researched and documented by Allaz from the first brief transport of animals by balloon in France in 1783 to the vast global networks of the integrated express carriers in the 21st century. As a true scholar he fits his narrative into the larger framework of political military economic and aviation history. This book should stand for years as the definitive work on the history of air cargo and airmail and will be of immense value to the academic community to the air cargo industry the postal services and to the general public.
