

Under new Ofcom protections, broadband providers must:

- 1 Provide more realistic speed estimates at the point of sale, which reflect peak times.

- 2 Always provide a minimum guaranteed speed at the point of sale.

Did you know that if your speed falls below XMbit/s for a sustained period you may have a right to exit your contract?

- 3 Let customers walk away penalty-free if speeds fall below the minimum guaranteed level.

Providers will have one month to improve speed before offering right to exit.

For residential customers the right to exit will apply to phone and TV services bought at the same time as broadband.

- 4 Give you these rights, regardless of their broadband technology.

strands of scholarship from law economics and political science to explore two key themes the influence of economic evidence on the discretionary assessments of economic regulators and the limits of judicial review of economic evidence supplemented with comparative examination of both UK and US systems In light of the challenges posed by economic evidence Mantzari argues the appropriate scope of judicial review in the era of regulatory economics and what the optimal institutional response to the pervasiveness of economic evidence in regulation should be Building on comparative institutional analysis this book rejects single factor explanations such as the individual knowledge of judges in favour of a richer set of macro and micro level factors that shape the relationships between courts and regulators Mantzari argues that the recipe for adjudicating economic evidence requires a balance in which a degree of epistemic diversity is introduced in courts and deference is accorded to regulatory agencies on grounds of institutional competency The book combines theoretical doctrinal comparative and empirical analysis and it is written to be accessible to lawyers economists judges regulators policymakers and political scientists
