BANK RECONCILIATION STATEMENTS

this chapter covers . . .

In the last chapter we balanced the cash book of a business to find out the balance of the bank account.

In this chapter we look at the way in which a business deals with any differences between the balance of the bank account in the cash book and the closing balance of the bank account shown by the bank statement for the same period.

These differences are explained by a document known as a bank reconciliation statement: which lists

- items which are in the cash book but not on the bank statement*
- items which are on the bank statement but not in the cash book*

This process is an important one: it enables the business to update its cash book and also helps to prove the accuracy of the bookkeeping of the business and the bank.
