

Rebuild Manual for the Boge Electronic CDS Strut (controlled damping suspension) used on the Alfa Romeo 164S, 164Q, 164QV

Authors: Steven Immel and Ben Bishop

Special thanks to Soren Snitker for donating a pair of old CCD struts for the benefit of this project.

first published: Nov. 3, 2011

last revision: Apr. 6, 2012

n.b. Manual now addresses the complete breakdown of the strut including the removal of the inner tubes, disassembly of the piston and solenoid assembly, and salvaging of CDS struts with non-CDS parts

The Boge CDS struts used on the Alfa Romeo 164 are of the highest German manufacturing quality for their time and purpose. According to the manufacturer they feature:

- induction hardened, chrome-plated piston rods, machined and super polished to exact roundness.
- superior double lip, low-friction seals for long life and consistent performance
- calibrated piston and foot valves
- valves flow-rated, calibrated and tested to be within 1% of engineering tolerance
- seamless cylinder tube according to the highest quality Swiss seamless steel tubing technology

These positive features along with the horrendous replacement price for electronic-type struts (ca. $1000/unit) are just some of the reasons that justify rebuilding these unique components when they are leaking or are no longer performing well. Poor performance is usually first noticed on the "auto/soft" setting with too much sway or "wiggle", or when the unique floating quality of the suspension becomes exaggerated; very seldom will the "sport/rigid" setting (= default) lose its special stiffness unless the struts have lost too much oil. There is one caveat to the rebuild: the piston rods must be in unblemished
